South Viets Pushed Out Of Bases Along Border

EGG HUNT — This young student at Brooks-Yates grew very excited with his find during an Easter Egg hunt held 12:30 Thursday afternoon at the school. The hunt was sponsored by Circleville Jaycees and their wives who covered the playground and school yard with eggs, both real and plastic, for the youngsters to find. Each child was later presented a filled basket and prize for the plastic eggs he collected.

Bangladesh Seeks U.S. Recognition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the unofficial Bangladesh mission to Washington says U.S. recognition of the new nation would help ease the bitterness over American opposition to independence for the 70 million Bengali people.

Enayap Karim, a former high-ranking Pakistani diplomat who defected to the Bangladesh movement last year, said in an interview that his country has noted hopeful signs that U.S. recognition is imminent.

Diplomatic sources say Washington will announce recognition within a week.

"We will be very happy to see this great super power recognize Bangladesh," said Karim. "In the past the U.S. attitude toward us has not been considered favorable by our people.

"When the West Pakistani military regime was trying to crush our independent struggle they used U.S. arms. There was no public expression of disapproval by the American government from March 25 last year when suppression of the Bengalis began until last December when we gained freedom," Karim said.

Karim emphasized that U.S. recognition and economic assistance to his famine-threatened, financially shaky country would help to correct the record.

"After recognition, both of our countries can develop their relations to mutual benefit on the basis of strict observance of non-interference in internal affairs, respect or sovereignty and by efforts to promote the peace, stability and economic development in the area."

Poor Vaccines Bring Attacks By Senators

GAO Report Shows Many 'Approved' Drugs Useless

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators say a General Accounting Office report sharply critical of federal vaccine regulation bolsters their case for an independent consumer-protection agency.

"If there had been an independent consumer advocate, I doubt that an agency such as the Division of Biologics Standards could have continued to allow millions of doses of watered influenza vaccine to be released for public use year after year," Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., said Thursday.

Ribicoff released a GAO report saying DBS let 32 ineffective vaccines stay on the market for at least 10 years.

GAO also said DBS, part of the Health, Education and Welfare Department's National Institutes of Health, released flu vaccines for three years even though its tests showed their potency to be as low as less than 1 per cent of standards.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., accused DBS of "callous disregard for the public health and safety," and said an independent consumer-advocacy agency would have looked out for public interest "in the face of bureaucratic lassitude, unconcern, neglect or perversion of purpose."

Based on the GAO report, he said, it is now known that "indiscriminate approval of influenza vaccine by DBS from 1966 to 1968 subjected Americans to over 60 million doses of what may have been worthless prevention—or worse."

GAO said it found 75 of the 263 biologic products licensed by DBS "generally were not recognized—according to the director of DBS—as being effec-

Nice Lady Is Really Dogcatcher

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Cathy Hunter is the kind of young woman that any stray dog would trust. And there's the rub; she is a city dogcatcher.

The attractive 22-year-old says her main weapons against canine violators of Long Beach's leash law are a soft voice, a whistle, a cuddle or two on occasion and reason.

Reason?

"In fact, I think you have a better chance of reasoning with a dog than a person," says Miss Hunter, the only woman on Long Beach's 15-member animal control patrol.

Miss Hunter, who patrols in a radio-equipped truck with portable kennels, has been on the job for about six months.

"I've found talking to people about their dogs is sometimes easier than talking to people about their kids," she says. "They seem genuinely more interested."

She said she hates to patrol a school area.

"The kids see the truck and they get scared," she said. "They think we're going to hurt the dog."

She adds quickly, however, that about 80 per cent of the dogs picked up by the animal control unit are placed with new owners in this seaside city of 360,000.

President Signs Bill Amending Time Regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon signed the split-state Daylight Saving Time amendment to the Uniform Time Act today.

The so-called Indiana amendment to the 1966 law grants a dozen states straddling time zone boundaries a new power to exempt parts of themselves from observing DST.

The law's original totalstate exemption provision, giving states an all or nothing choice when deciding whether to go along with the rest of the nation's advancement of clocks, was blamed for creating confusion and economic hardship in states split by time lines.

Alaska is in four time zones, while Indiana, Florida, Tennessee, Kentucky, Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Oregon and Idaho are in two zones. The amendment would apply to them. It would not change the total state exemption option for states fully within one time zone.

Postmaster General Orders Hiring Freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster General E.T. Klassen has ordered a 90-day freeze on hiring in the U.S. Postal Service as part of a cutback aimed at balancing the service's books without another rate hike.

"We must learn to live within our income," Klassen told a management meeting Wednesday.

Return Cincy Escape Indictments

CINCINNATI (AP) — A special Hamilton County grand jury Friday indicted 28 persons in connection with the mass escape March 20 from the county jail.

Twenty-three prisoners who escaped were among those indicted. Two women listed by the prosecutor as escaped were not indicted. Earlier Hamilton County chief deputy sheriff Harry Culler had said 24 persons escaped from the jail.

The inmates were charged with escape from restraint. In addition, two inmates were charged with conveying a weapon into the jail for escape.

Sixteen of the escapees have been recaptured.

The grand jury also indicted four persons on charges of harboring a felon and one person for assisting the escape. They were not identified.

Although the jury was directed to investigate only the jailbreak, it made several recommendations, including one for a new jail.

The grand jury, which called the present jail antiquated, said, "It is now the public's responsibility to see that this situation is recited."

A new alarm system for tighter security was proposed by the grand jury. It said, "The present system is 60 years old and all alarms do not have desirable accessibility."

The panel also recommended that:

—All guards be equipped with two-way communications while on duty.

—"Silent alarms" be placed on desks of jail personnel.

—As an interim measure, all existing alarms be connected with the Cincinnati police department communications center. Presently, all alarms are not directly connected.

The two escapees charged with conveying a weapon into the jail were Robert Hayes and Arthur Tarpley.

Indicted for harboring a felon were Jesse Buchanan, Denise Cheatham, Helen Johnson and Alvin Mallory.

Stanley Marshall was indicted for assisting escape from restraint.

The indictments did not specify details of the charges against those five.

A total of 58 persons testified before the 10-man, five-woman grand jury which opened its investigation last Friday. Witnesses included police officers, janitors in the courthouse building, a judge and some of the recaptured escapees.

Irish Violence Escalates As British Minister Arrives

BELFAST (AP) — William Whitelaw, Britain's minister for Northern Ireland, started his new assignment today as violence escalated among Catholics, Protestants and troops before the Easter weekend.

The new secretary of state arrived from London Thursday night amid tight security precautions.

During the coming year, Whitelaw will try to find a solution to the strife that has thrown the one million Protestants and 500,000 Roman Catholics of the province into ferocious enmity.

He has said he will stay in Northern Ireland throughout the critical weekend, which launches the province's "marching season." Annual Protestant parades celebrating battle victories over Catholics centuries ago, are due to start soon.

Thousands of Catholics also are expected to take to the streets over the holiday, defying a ban on parades. Many want to honor the memory of Irish Republican Army men killed by the British army in recent months while others commemorate those who fell in the 1916 Easter uprising against British rule. This brought a civil war ending in Ireland's partition into an inddepedent south and a British North.

Britain's worry is that the Catholic parades will provoke battles with militant Protestants and spark a new civil war. Normally the Protestants do not interfere in the Catholic marches but security officials fear they will this year because of Britain's takeover of the province.

London has promised to add 600 troops to the 14,500 already in the strife-torn province, but in 1916, even the presence of 70,000 British troops failed to avert civil war.

A wave of violence Thursday brought Northern Ireland's death toll in nearly three years of fighting to 293.

A woman bystander was shot dead during a three-hour gun battle between IRA guerrillas and British soldiers along the twisting streets of Belfast's Catholic enclave of Andersonstown.

A British army explosives expert trying to dismantle a bomb was killed and at least 30 civilians were wounded in bomb blasts in several cities.

Gilligan Says Pen Guards Fired For Insubordination

CINCINNATI (AP) — Gov. John J. Gilligan said Thursday he fired striking guards at the Ohio Penitentiary because they were "insubordinate."

The governor, in remarks for a video-taped program for Scripps-Howard Broadcasting at WCPO-TV to be aired this weekend, said he did not use Ohio's Ferguson Act to end the strike because he did not need it.

The act outlaws strikes by state employes.

"Now if they feel they can appeal their cases to the personnel review board — and I'm not trying to foreclose any possibilities of that — they have a right to make their views known, and their side heard," Gilligan said. "But we will not tolerate insubordination and we will not tolerate playing games with public safety to gain a little leverage."

The governor blamed "a breakdown in communication within the corrections personnel themselves" for the "sick out" following negotiations with prisoners during a hungerstrike.

The governor said there was actually no bargaining with the prisoners. The concession made were already programmed through the Governor's Task Force on Penal Reform, he said.

"We told them they were already scheduled for introduction and they would be introduced. They said 'okay, fine.'

"The guards said, 'oh, you've just given in to them.' That wasn't the case at all."

"Some of the ringleaders (of the guards) in what was a wildcat strike simply want to use the leverage of staying off the job to lever the state into restoring what they felt was a prerequisite for prison personnel at the Ohio penitentiary — the so-called hazardous duty pay, which had been introduced by the former administration after the 1968 prison riots in Columbus."

Gov. Gilligan said raises were granted and jobs reanalyzed "and when they understood it, most of them responded by going back to work, as they had been instructed. Some of them did not."

Jail Escapee Recaptured

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Police recaptured escapee Charles Saar, 22, in a downtown bar Thursday night and charged him with resisting arrest.

Saar broke out of the Lucas County Jail last Monday. He was being held after being charged on two counts of armed robbery. He reportedly made his escape by hiding in garbage.

Earlier this year, police said Saar had escaped from the Mansfield Reformatory.

Nixon Moves To Block Rail Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today blocked, for 60 days, the threat of strikes in two railroad labor disputes.

Nixon's action—appointing emergency boards under the National Railway Labor Act—removed the possibility of the railroad strikes which could have come at midnight tonight.

One case involves a wage and work rules dispute involving some 6,000 AFL-CIO Sheet Metal Workers who work in the repair shops of all the nation's rail lines. The union had announced no specific strike action, but it was believed prepared to stage walkouts on at least several major rail lines.

Congress has intervened with special legislation to prevent or avert major strikes over the last two Sheet Metal negotiations.

The other emergency board action by Nixon involves the big Penn Central Railroad system and the AFL-CIO United Transportation Union. The union had said it would strike the Penn Central at midnight Friday if the company carried out plans to start eliminating some 6,000 jobs through layoffs over several years.

Nixon's action automatically bars any change in the status quo in both disputes until 60 days expire.

Prince Mohammad Barred From Plane

LONDON (AP) — Prince Mohammad, brother of Jordan's King Hussein, has been barred from boarding a plane to Bermuda because he and his bodyguards were carrying weapons, including three submachine guns in their luggage.

"I have never seen such an armory," an official at London Airport said Wednesday.

The prince stalked out of the airport and said he would protest to Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

Big Stores Freeze Or Cut Meat Prices After Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A day after Treasury Secretary John B. Connally talked with leading chain-store executives about the high cost of food, three supermarket chains moved to stop the spiral.

Grand Union and Winn-Dixie put freezes on current prices Thursday. Safeway Stores, Inc., cut beef prices in its 246 stores in Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

Grand Union froze fresh meat and poultry prices for 30 days in its 500-plus stores in the East, and Winn-Dixie, with 871 stores in the Southeast, froze all food prices through April.

The Agriculture Department, meanwhile, announced that the prices paid to farmers for beef on the hoof dropped 20 cents per hundredweight in the month ending March 15. A record high of $32.60 per hundred pounds of beef was set last month. It fell to $32.40 in the latest price period.

The decline, though slight, was the first since last summer.

Safeway said it lowered its meat prices as a result of the drop in prices paid for cattle.

Wednesday, Connally summoned representatives of the 12 largest food chains to discuss the high food prices.

Those taking part in the meeting said no pressure was exerted by the government, but Connally and Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said after the session that a drop in prices of meat could be expected soon.

Both said it would be a result of declining wholesale prices of beef, not because of government pressure.

Interviewed Thursday by the National Public Affairs Center for Television, Butz said the drop could be expected in the coming month as declines in prices at the farm filter through the farm-to-market channel.

Cut Violence On British News

LONDON (AP) — The British Broadcasting Corp. has ordered producers to show less violence and bloodletting in television programs, including the news.

David Attenborough, television programs director of the BBC, ruled that violence for its own sake must be checked.

It "ought not to be presented in ways which might glorify it or present it as a proper solution to interperson conflicts," his new code said.

Color television was said to have increased the impact of violence by the sight of red blood.

2nd Gunship, Red MIG21 Said Downed

SAIGON (AP) — A swelling North Vietnamese onslaught in the far north drove South Vietnamese from two more bases today in the heaviest fighting there in four years.

Field reports said a third base also may have been abandoned. One base was given up Thursday in the first day of enemy attacks on bases along the demilitarized zone.

The air war also heated up as a North Vietnamese MIG21 was shot down and the United States lost its second computerized four-engine gunship in two days and one of the Air Force's biggest rescue helicopters.

New U.S. air raids were launched inside North Vietnam after a nearly two-week lull and American jets attacked enemy gun positions in the southern half of the DM.

Hundreds of South Vietnamese troops and some American forces, at the option of local field commanders, were ordered on heightened alert.

U.S. and South Vietnamese field commanders in the 3rd Military Region that includes Saigon and 11 surrounding provinces increased the state of readiness for all of their troops.

The U.S. headquarters for Saigon ordered all Americans off the streets of the capital. But an hour later the headquarters of Gen. Creighton W.

Gilligan Signs 6 Measures Into Law

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Gov. John J. Gilligan has signed into law a bill giving the State Controlling Board the authority to spend money appropriated to the emergency fund.

The law, which took effect upon the governor's signature, delegates to the legislative-controlled board authority that once rested with the administration-dominated State Emergency Board.

The change, however, was not a partisan issue. Legislators from both parties sponsored the bill.

The governor signed five other bills, all effective June 29.

They accomplish the following:

—Allow transfer of pension credits between the Highway Patrol, police and firemen pension funds.

—Make the Cuyahoga County Juvenile Court a division of the Common Pleas Court.

—Remove the restriction against taking a child in police custody to any place other than that specified in the law, such as a police station.

—Require automatic tabulating equipment used in election vote tallies to be tested the day before and the day after election.

—Permit public employes nearing retirement who were in a private retirement plan before becoming members of the Public Employes Retirement System to qualify for PERS benefits.

Stanley Marshall was indicted for assisting escape from restraint.

The indictments did not specify details of the charges against those five.

A total of 58 persons testified before the 10-man, five-woman grand jury which opened its investigation last Friday. Witnesses included police officers, janitors in the courthouse building, a judge and some of the recaptured escapees.

Irish Violence Escalates As British Minister Arrives

BELFAST (AP) — William Whitelaw, Britain's minister for Northern Ireland, started his new assignment today as violence escalated among Catholics, Protestants and troops before the Easter weekend.

The new secretary of state arrived from London Thursday night amid tight security precautions.

During the coming year, Whitelaw will try to find a solution to the strife that has thrown the one million Protestants and 500,000 Roman Catholics of the province into ferocious enmity.

He has said he will stay in Northern Ireland throughout the critical weekend, which launches the province's "marching season." Annual Protestant parades celebrating battle victories over Catholics centuries ago, are due to start soon.

Thousands of Catholics also are expected to take to the streets over the holiday, defying a ban on parades. Many want to honor the memory of Irish Republican Army men killed by the British army in recent months while others commemorate those who fell in the 1916 Easter uprising against British rule. This brought a civil war ending in Ireland's partition into an inddepedent south and a British North.

Britain's worry is that the Catholic parades will provoke battles with militant Protestants and spark a new civil war. Normally the Protestants do not interfere in the Catholic marches but security officials fear they will this year because of Britain's takeover of the province.

London has promised to add 600 troops to the 14,500 already in the strife-torn province, but in 1916, even the presence of 70,000 British troops failed to avert civil war.

A wave of violence Thursday brought Northern Ireland's death toll in nearly three years of fighting to 293.

A woman bystander was shot dead during a three-hour gun battle between IRA guerrillas and British soldiers along the twisting streets of Belfast's Catholic enclave of Andersonstown.

A British army explosives expert trying to dismantle a bomb was killed and at least 30 civilians were wounded in bomb blasts in several cities.

Jail Escapee Recaptured

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Police recaptured escapee Charles Saar, 22, in a downtown bar Thursday night and charged him with resisting arrest.

Saar broke out of the Lucas County Jail last Monday. He was being held after being charged on two counts of armed robbery. He reportedly made his escape by hiding in garbage.

Earlier this year, police said Saar had escaped from the Mansfield Reformatory.

Gilligan Says Pen Guards Fired For Insubordination

CINCINNATI (AP) — Gov. John J. Gilligan said Thursday he fired striking guards at the Ohio Penitentiary because they were "insubordinate."

The governor, in remarks for a video-taped program for Scripps-Howard Broadcasting at WCPO-TV to be aired this weekend, said he did not use Ohio's Ferguson Act to end the strike because he did not need it.

The act outlaws strikes by state employes.

"Now if they feel they can appeal their cases to the personnel review board — and I'm not trying to foreclose any possibilities of that — they have a right to make their views known, and their side heard," Gilligan said. "But we will not tolerate insubordination and we will not tolerate playing games with public safety to gain a little leverage."

The governor blamed "a breakdown in communication within the corrections personnel themselves" for the "sick out" following negotiations with prisoners during a hungerstrike.

The governor said there was actually no bargaining with the prisoners. The concession made were already programmed through the Governor's Task Force on Penal Reform, he said.

"We told them they were already scheduled for introduction and they would be introduced. They said 'okay, fine.'

"The guards said, 'oh, you've just given in to them.' That wasn't the case at all."

"Some of the ringleaders (of the guards) in what was a wildcat strike simply want to use the leverage of staying off the job to lever the state into restoring what they felt was a prerequisite for prison personnel at the Ohio penitentiary — the so-called hazardous duty pay, which had been introduced by the former administration after the 1968 prison riots in Columbus."

Gov. Gilligan said raises were granted and jobs reanalyzed "and when they understood it, most of them responded by going back to work, as they had been instructed. Some of them did not."

Nixon Moves To Block Rail Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today blocked, for 60 days, the threat of strikes in two railroad labor disputes.

Nixon's action—appointing emergency boards under the National Railway Labor Act—removed the possibility of the railroad strikes which could have come at midnight tonight.

One case involves a wage and work rules dispute involving some 6,000 AFL-CIO Sheet Metal Workers who work in the repair shops of all the nation's rail lines. The union had announced no specific strike action, but it was believed prepared to stage walkouts on at least several major rail lines.

Congress has intervened with specical legislation to prevent or avert major strikes over the last two Sheet Metal negotiations.

The other emergency board action by Nixon involves the big Penn Central Railroad system and the AFL-CIO United Transportation Union. The union had said it would strike the Penn Central at midnight Friday if the company carried out plans to start eliminating some 6,000 jobs through layoffs over several years.

Nixon's action automatically bars any change in the status quo in both disputes until 60 days expire.

Big Stores Freeze Or Cut Meat Prices After Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A day after Treasury Secretary John B. Connally talked with leading chain-store executives about the high cost of food, three supermarket chains moved to stop the spiral.

Grand Union and Winn-Dixie put freezes on current prices Thursday. Safeway Stores, Inc., cut beef prices in its 246 stores in Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

Grand Union froze fresh meat and poultry prices for 30 days in its 500-plus stores in the East, and Winn-Dixie, with 871 stores in the Southeast, froze all food prices through April.

The Agriculture Department, meanwhile, announced that the prices paid to farmers for beef on the hoof dropped 20 cents per hundredweight in the month ending March 15. A record high of $32.60 per hundred pounds of beef was set last month. It fell to $32.40 in the latest price period.

The decline, though slight, was the first since last summer.

Safeway said it lowered its meat prices as a result of the drop in prices paid for cattle.

Wednesday, Connally summoned representatives of the 12 largest food chains to discuss the high food prices.

Those taking part in the meeting said no pressure was exerted by the government, but Connally and Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said after the session that a drop in prices of meat could be expected soon.

Both said it would be a result of declining wholesale prices of beef, not because of government pressure.

Interviewed Thursday by the National Public Affairs Center for Television, Butz said the drop could be expected in the coming month as declines in prices at the farm filter through the farm-to-market channel.

Prince Mohammad Barred From Plane

LONDON (AP) — Prince Mohammad, brother of Jordan's King Hussein, has been barred from boarding a plane to Bermuda because he and his bodyguards were carrying weapons, including three submachine guns in their luggage.

"I have never seen such an armory," an official at London Airport said Wednesday.

The prince stalked out of the airport and said he would protest to Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

Cut Violence On British News

LONDON (AP) — The British Broadcasting Corp. has ordered producers to show less violence and bloodletting in television programs, including the news.

David Attenborough, television programs director of the BBC, ruled that violence for its own sake must be checked.

It "ought not to be presented in ways which might glorify it or present it as a proper solution to interpersonal conflicts," his new code said.

Color television was said to have increased the impact of violence by the sight of red blood.

Gilligan Signs 6 Measures Into Law

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Gov. John J. Gilligan has signed into law a bill giving the State Controlling Board the authority to spend money appropriated to the emergency fund.

The law, which took effect upon the governor's signature, delegates to the legislative-controlled board authority that once rested with the administration-dominated State Emergency Board.

The change, however, was not a partisan issue. Legislators from both parties sponsored the bill.

The governor signed five other bills, all effective June 29.

They accomplish the following:

—Allow transfer of pension credits between the Highway Patrol, police and firemen pension funds.

—Make the Cuyahoga County Juvenile Court a division of the Common Pleas Court.

—Remove the restriction against taking a child in police custody to any place other than that specified in the law, such as a police station.

—Require automatic tabulating equipment used in election vote tallies to be tested the day before and the day after election.

—Permit public employes nearing retirement who were in a private retirement plan before becoming members of the Public Employes Retirement System to qualify for PERS benefits.

Four Injured In Rash Of County Wrecks

Four persons were injured as a result of three accidents investigated by the Pickaway County Sheriff's Department Thursday.

Two of the wrecks occurred on U. S. Route 23, north of the city.

Richard Cox, 37, Route 2, Lucasville, was treated for back injuries after a car driven by 25-year-old Deanna Brewer, Columbus, struck him as he was working on the road surface.

According to Deputy Warren Straley, who arrested Brewer for failure to drive in the right lane, she was southbound on Route 23 and applied her brakes when approaching the construction site.

* * *

HOWEVER, she lost control of her car and struck the right side of a flatbed water truck owned by Saxon Construction Co., Circleville, that was parked in the passing lane.

Her car then traveled 25 additional feet where it struck Cox, who was operating a concrete cutter.

At 6:05 p.m. Thursday, Ervin J. Violet, 73, Indianapolis, Ind., apparently suffered a heart attack and his car hurtled across the medium strip on Route 23.

He was treated for contusions at Berger Hospital and transferred immediately to Riverside Hospital, Columbus, for treatment of the heart seizure.

According to investigating Sheriff's Deputy Lowell Ferguson, Violet was northbound on Route 23 when his car left the west side of the roadway into the median strip.

The car traveled 334 feet before striking a drainage pit and careening into the southbound lane.

* * *

THE car came back to the median and before coming to a stop blocking both northbound lanes.

A passenger in the car, which was demolished, Pearl Violet, also of Indianapolis, was uninjured.

Deputy Don Thompson arrested Theresa B. Jones, 66, Clarksburg, for reckless operation following his investigation of a two-car wreck 9:15 p.m. Thursday on Route 207.

According to the report, a car driven by David A. Jones, 19, Clarksburg, was attempting to pass the other Jones' car, when it pulled left in front of him, apparently trying to enter a private drive.

Both cars sustained only minor damage as they were driven into a drainage ditch.

Mrs. Jones refused treatment for a forehead bruise.

A passenger in her car, Betty Downing, 54, Clarksburg, also refused treatment for leg bruises.

Wagner Retires From Telephone Company Today

GREENHOUSE

JOAN AND KEITH WAGNER

By DAVE AMEY
Herald Staff Writer

Keith Wagner, former 51-year-old commercial manager of the Circleville exchange of General Telephone is now a 51-year-old florist.

His retirement is effective Friday when Wagner will terminate 32 years service with the company.

He joined General Telephone Jan. 2, 1940, as a groundsman for the Circleville opration.

After several promotions, he was named plant supervisor of the Cadiz exchange in 1952 and returned to Circleville in 1959 as district plant manager.

* * *

IN 1966, Wagner was appointed commercial manager, a move that tabbed him as one of the top three telephone executives in the district.

The likeable Wagner insists he's too young to retire, so he has taken a full interest in the Walnut Street Greenhouse.

"I think I'll devote my time to the greenhouse and business. And maybe some fishing, too" he said. "I also would like to start a commercial mowing business in Circleville, as it would coincide with the greenhouse operation."

Apparently to give him a boost in the mowing business, his associates at General Telephone gave him a chain saw at a March 4 farewell party.

He was honored with a "This Is Your Life" presentation and dinner at Wardell's Party Home by 92 friends and associates.

Master of ceremonies for the event was R. J. Finn, southern division commercial manager.

* * *

IN addition to the saw, the commercial staff presented Wagner with a tie tac made from a half dollar.

His wife, Joan, says she's happy to have him around now. They live at 122 Seyfert Ave. and have two children.

Keitha, the oldest, is a graduating senior at Virginia Intermont School for Girls, and Max is a freshman at Ohio University.

Women Rig Drivers Claim Truck Firm Discriminates

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Two petite female truck drivers have filed sex discrimination charges after a company ruling that prohibits single women from making long-distance hauls with men drivers.

"Ever since I was a little kid I wanted to drive a big truck," said Virginia Barnes, an attractive 35-year-old brunette. "They gave me a chance and then they took it away from me."

Mrs. Barnes and 48-year-old Pauline Blackburn have filed complaints with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission against Watkins Motor Lines Inc. of Lakeland.

The women complained after company officials decreed on March 1 that drivers of opposite sexes could not team up on trucks with sleeping quarters unless they were married.

"There is less chance of hanky panky on the road than there would be in the trucking office," scoffed Mrs. Blackburn, a pretty divorcee.

"I think I should be able to drive a truck because of my ability, not because I'm married," added Mrs. Barnes, a mother of two who is in the process of divorcing her husband.

Barney R. Brown, vice president of the Lakeland trucking firm, said that the ruling "had nothing to do with discrimination ... It creates too much of a problem.

"The policy of Watkins Motor Lines is to have both male and female drivers," he said. "We do allow male drivers to drive together or single, and we do allow female drivers to drive together or single."

Watkin's personnel director Arthur Farr added that the company employs several husband-wife teams.

Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Blackburn, both under 5-foot-2 and 105 pounds, learned to drive the huge tractor-trailer rigs at a vocational school. They handled Watkins rigs for nearly three months before the company ruling.

Both women say they never asked for any special treatment from their male partners.

Mrs. Barnes said, "I got my blouse dirty and I got my hands dirty. When we unloaded 40,000 pounds of concentrate, I unloaded my share—half."

Spending days and often nights in the saddle, cowboys rubbed tobacco juice in their eyelids so the sting would keep them awake.

Man Admits More Thefts

The Pickaway County Sheriff's Department cleared two theft cases Thursday and opened investigation on a third.

Daniel Broughton, charged with breaking and entering in an Ashville home last weekend, confessed to taking three gas lights and a trunk valued at $25 from a Groveport home.

He also admitted stealing an antique love seat from an abandoned building owned by Paul Congrove, 705 Lancaster Pike, but said he did not take an antique stove, six wrenches and a horse collar from Congrove, which were also missing.

None of the thefts were reported to the Sheriff's Department until Broughton admitted taking the items.

B52 Slams Into Houses

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A giant B52 bomber crashed and exploded in a residential area today, and Mayor Carl Langford said seven crewmen aboard were killed. He also said there were numerous civilian casualties.

People who saw the eight-engined jet crash said at least eight homes were damaged when it slammed into the ground in a near vertical dive. Three of the homes were gutted by flames, witnesses said, and the roof was ripped off a fourth.

It was not known if there were any civilian deaths.

Bart Forster, a spokesman for McCoy Air Force Base where the plane was based, said it carried a crew of seven when it exploded and burned about a quarter-mile northwest of the base.

The base is just south of Orlando.

Witnesses said the bomber still was burning about an hour after the crash and that residents of homes around the crash site were being evacuated because one wing of the aircraft still was filled with fuel.

The Pentagon said the B52 carried no nuclear weapons.

Forster said the crew had declared an in-flight emergency and reported they had a fire on board just before the crash.

An Air Force spokesman said the plane was attached to the 30th Bomb Wing at McCoy and was returning to the base from a routine training flight.

Lt. Charles Goulder of the Orlando Fire Department said casualties were tken to the McCoy AFB hospital and other hospitals in the area.

Four Injured In Rash Of County Wrecks

Four persons were injured as a result of three accidents investigated by the Pickaway County Sheriff's Department Thursday.

Two of the wrecks occurred on U. S. Route 23, north of the city.

Richard Cox, 37, Route 2, Lucasville, was treated for back injuries after a car driven by 25-year-old Deanna Brewer, Columbus, struck him as he was working on the road surface.

According to Deputy Warren Straley, who arrested Brewer for failure to drive in the right lane, she was southbound on Route 23 and applied her brakes when approaching the construction site.

* * *

HOWEVER, she lost control of her car and struck the right side of a flatbed water truck owned by Saxon Construction Co., Circleville, that was parked in the passing lane.

Her car then traveled 25 additional feet where it struck Cox, who was operating a concrete cutter.

At 6:05 p.m. Thursday, Ervin J. Violet, 73, Indianapolis, Ind., apparently suffered a heart attack and his car hurtled across the medium strip on Route 23.

He was treated for contusions at Berger Hospital and transferred immediately to Riverside Hospital, Columbus, for treatment of the heart seizure.

According to investigating Sheriff's Deputy Lowell Ferguson, Violet was northbound on Route 23 when his car left the west side of the roadway into the median strip.

The car traveled 334 feet before striking a drainage pit and careening into the southbound lane.

* * *

THE car came back to the median and before coming to a stop blocking both northbound lanes.

A passenger in the car, which was demolished, Pearl Violet, also of Indianapolis, was uninjured.

Deputy Don Thompson arrested Theresa B. Jones, 66, Clarksburg, for reckless operation following his investigation of a two-car wreck 9:15 p.m. Thursday on Route 207.

According to the report, a car driven by David A. Jones, 19, Clarksburg, was attempting to pass the other Jones' car, when it pulled left in front of him, apparently trying to enter a private drive.

Both cars sustained only minor damage as they were driven into a drainage ditch.

Mrs. Jones refused treatment for a forehead bruise.

A passenger in her car, Betty Downing, 54, Clarksburg, also refused treatment for leg bruises.

Wagner Retires From Telephone Company Today

JOAN AND KEITH WAGNER

By DAVE AMEY
Herald Staff Writer

Keith Wagner, former 51-year-old commercial manager of the Circleville exchange of General Telephone is now a 51-year-old florist.

His retirement is effective Friday when Wagner will terminate 32 years service with the company.

He joined General Telephone Jan. 2, 1940, as a groundsman for the Circleville opration.

After several promotions, he was named plant supervisor of the Cadiz exchange in 1952 and returned to Circleville in 1959 as district plant manager.

* * *

IN 1966, Wagner was appointed commercial manager, a move that tabbed him as one of the top three telephone executives in the district.

The likeable Wagner insists he's too young to retire, so he has taken a full interest in the Walnut Street Greenhouse.

"I think I'll devote my time to the greenhouse and business. And maybe some fishing, too" he said. "I also would like to start a commercial mowing business in Circleville, as it would coincide with the greenhouse operation."

Apparently to give him a boost in the mowing business, his associates at General Telephone gave him a chain saw at a March 4 farewell party.

He was honored with a "This Is Your Life" presentation and dinner at Wardell's Party Home by 92 friends and associates.

Master of ceremonies for the event was R. J. Finn, southern division commercial manager.

* * *

IN addition to the saw, the commercial staff presented Wagner with a tie tac made from a half dollar.

His wife, Joan, says she's happy to have him around now. They live at 122 Seyfert Ave. and have two children.

Keitha, the oldest, is a graduating senior at Virginia Intermont School for Girls, and Max is a freshman at Ohio University.

Women Rig Drivers Claim Truck Firm Discriminates

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Two petite female truck drivers have filed sex discrimination charges after a company ruling that prohibits single women from making long-distance hauls with men drivers.

"Ever since I was a little kid I wanted to drive a big truck," said Virginia Barnes, an attractive 35-year-old brunette. "They gave me a chance and then they took it away from me."

Mrs. Barnes and 48-year-old Pauline Blackburn have filed complaints with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission against Watkins Motor Lines Inc. of Lakeland.

The women complained after company officials decreed on March 1 that drivers of opposite sexes could not team up on trucks with sleeping quarters unless they were married.

"There is less chance of hanky panky on the road than there would be in the trucking office," scoffed Mrs. Blackburn, a pretty divorcee.

"I think I should be able to drive a truck because of my ability, not because I'm married," added Mrs. Barnes, a mother of two who is in the process of divorcing her husband.

Barney R. Brown, vice president of the Lakeland trucking firm, said that the ruling "had nothing to do with discrimination .. . It creates too much of a problem.

"The policy of Watkins Motor Lines is to have both male and female drivers," he said. "We do allow male drivers to drive together or single, and we do allow female drivers to drive together or single."

Watkin's personnel director Arthur Farr added that the company employs several husband-wife teams.

Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Blackburn, both under 5-foot-2 and 105 pounds, learned to drive the huge tractor-trailer rigs at a vocational school. They handled Watkins rigs for nearly three months before the company ruling.

Both women say they never asked for any special treatment from their male partners.

Mrs. Barnes said, "I got my blouse dirty and I got my hands dirty. When we unloaded 40,000 pounds of concentrate, I unloaded my share—half."

Spending days and often nights in the saddle, cowboys rubbed tobacco juice in their eyelids so the sting would keep them awake.

Man Admits More Thefts

The Pickaway County Sheriff's Department cleared two theft cases Thursday and opened investigation on a third.

Daniel Broughton, charged with breaking and entering in an Ashville home last weekend, confessed to taking three gas lights and a trunk valued at $25 from a Groveport home.

He also admitted stealing an antique love seat from an abandoned building owned by Paul Congrove, 705 Lancaster Pike, but said he did not take an antique stove, six wrenches and a horse collar from Congrove, which were also missing.

None of the thefts were reported to the Sheriff's Department until Broughton admitted taking the items.

B52 Slams Into Houses

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A giant B52 bomber crashed and exploded in a residential area today, and Mayor Carl Langford said seven crewmen aboard were killed. He also said there were numerous civilian casualties.

People who saw the eight-engined jet crash said at least eight homes were damaged when it slammed into the ground in a near vertical dive. Three of the homes were gutted by flames, witnesses said, and the roof was ripped off a fourth.

It was not known if there were any civilian deaths.

Bart Forster, a spokesman for McCoy Air Force Base where the plane was based, said it carried a crew of seven when it exploded and burned about a quarter-mile northwest of the base.

The base is just south of Orlando.

Witnesses said the bomber still was burning about an hour after the crash and that residents of homes around the crash site were being evacuated because one wing of the aircraft still was filled with fuel.

The Pentagon said the B52 carried no nuclear weapons.

Forster said the crew had declared an in-flight emergency and reported they had a fire on board just before the crash.

An Air Force spokesman said the plane was attached to the 30th Bomb Wing at McCoy and was returning to the base from a routine training flight.

Lt. Charles Goulder of the Orlando Fire Department said casualties were tken to the McCoy AFB hospital and other hospitals in the area.

Huff Hearing Continued To Monday

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A State Personnel Board of Review hearing will be continued Monday for William Huff, former Lima State Hospital attendant who was cleared of criminal charges, but who is still fighting to get his job back.

The hearing was recessed for the Easter weekend Thursday after a stormy session in which a Lima patient, Isaac Moore, 25, of Cleveland, claimed he was beaten by Huff and other attendants.

Huff was one of 31 employes and former employes of the hospital indicted by a special state grand jury on charges of patient abuse. All of the employes were dismissed before the indictments were returned.

Huff was the first to be tried. The trial ended when Judge John Harnishfeger directed a verdict of innocent.

Evidence being presented at Huff's hearing is substantially the same as that presented at his trial.

Atty. Gen. William Brown said the difference is that the board hearing is a civil proceeding and the court case was a criminal one. Proof of criminal guilt requires evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. Grounds for dismissal require only a "preponderance of evidence."

"That criminal case has nothing to do with this case," Brown said. "The directed (court) verdict is not relevant. It's not introducable as evidence before the Personnel Board."

Catholics Split Over Contemporary Services

NEW YORK (AP) — You find them on both sides, doing their own thing. This has become a frequent situation in the Roman Catholic Church ever since it started remodeling its way to contemporary times. Some members determinedly resist the process; others plunge ahead of it.

Although the main body of the Church moves along with the transitions at the sanctioned pace, the back-and-haul pressures go on both rearward and forward of it.

While the border-zone moves and countermoves take place in many sections of the country, the contrasting sides of the spectrum are shown in two particular situations—one in Boston, the other in Paynesville, Minn.

In Paynesville, the Rev. Maurice Landwehr continues to celebrate the old Tridentine Mass for a group of worshippers opposed to the Church's shift to a new vernacular liturgy.

His congregation, made up of people from surrounding communities, meets in an American Legion hall which used to be a church. They're one of several "traditionalist" groups functioning around the country in resistance to Church reforms.

"The Church is above all divine, only secondarily is it human, so how can they make changes?" says Father Landwehr. "The role of the Church is not to change, not to alter but only to preserve the wonderful works of God."

Father Landwehr resigned from his assigned parish post last December following controversy over his use of the old rite and took a leave of absence to continue using it with his new congregation.

As for the status of Father Landwehr's services, the St. Cloud, Minn., diocesean chancellor, the Rev. Robert Barron, says the matter has not been officially raised, but the number of participants was small and he added:

"No action has been taken and we have no plans at this time to take action."

A similar uncertainty hangs over various newly formed groups of Catholic worshippers who go beyond the authorized changes, and join in developing freer, more experimental styles of worship.

This is the case with the "Emmaus Community," a group of Catholic families in the Norwood area of the Boston archdiocese. They left their regular parishes and now meet weekly in a hall for informal worship, mostly prayer, discussion and singing.

The archdiocese has rejected the group's request for recognition, advising in a letter read to its representatives that Church members must worship in their regular parishes and fragmenting them cannot be allowed.

However, Robert Lee, a member of the Emmaus group, says the "archbishop's letter fell short of ordering us to cease and desist."

Similar innovative groups have developed in numerous places, including Emmaus House in New York. There Protestants and Catholics meet and pray together, recalling the Lord's Supper in an "agape" or love feast.

Cambodian Turnabout

Democracy comes in many forms. Some of them are so shapeless that democratic institutions can be turned off at will. Cambodia now belongs to this group.

In one move, Lon Nol, Cambodia's leader, discharged a constituent assembly and placed himself in absolute power over the besieged country. If official titles have any importance, Lon Nol now has them all, including commander of the armed forces.

The constitution which the assembly had nearly completed now is a piece of worthless paper. The policies and freedoms in Cambodia are whatever Lon Nol says they are. Yet the West cannot be entirely unsympathetic to the distress which drove Lon Nol to his extreme acts against democracy.

The war in Cambodia has been going poorly. In the last two years large areas of the country hve been seized by the communists. Invasions of allied troops to try to help the inefficient Cambodian forces are common. One third of the people have lost their homes. Not exactly conditions for business as usual.

Organized Wheelers

What bicyclists need to protect their interests is a national organization patterned after the AAA. So says the Bicycle Club of America, with headquarters in Burbank, Calif .

Now even the cyclists — those symbols of free-wheeling independence — are being organized.

To start with, the club contends national registration of bicycles would help reduce the millions which are stolen every year. That's right, millions.

No one knows the actual total, but 400,000 were reported lost in California alone last year.

A computer matches bike serial numbers, local license numbers and a club identifying number for each member. Phones have been installed to accept toll-free calls from either finders or losers of bicycles.

With a national setup like that, the junior underworld set of bicycle thief rings hasn't got a chance.

The Business World

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) -- There is one criticism of multinational companies on which critic and advocate agree: Very real problems are posed for small nations by the presence within their borders of huge foreign corporations.

There, it seems, agreement ends. One side argues that such companies are extremely sensitive and submissive to policies of their host country. Others contend that the guest can and likely will rough up the host.

But this is only a minor disagreement compared with the issue of jobs. Do U.S. companies with subsidiaries abroad cause jobs to be lost domestically? Or perhaps do they generate jobs at home? Opinions are numerous as nations.

In his book, "The Age of Discontinuity," published in 1969, Peter Drucker states:

"Every dollar invested in a subsidiary abroad lends too many dollars of American exports within a very short time, in addition to a flow of dividends. In fact, investment abroad during the last 20 years has fueled full employment in the United States . . . . "

But talk to a union leader and he will quote studies suggesting that between 1966 and 1969 the U.S. multinational corporations cost domestic workers 500,000 job opportunities.

The disagreement is of vital interest for two reasons:

—First, U.S. companies make up the preponderance of multinational firms, which now produce goods and services at the rate of $500 billion a year.

—Second, the Hartke-Burke bill, officially known as "The Foreign Trade and Investment Act of 1972" although it is still uncertain whether hearings will be held this year, seeks to limit the power of multinationals.

Specifically, the bill seeks a quota on U.S. imports, a limit on U.S. private investments abroad, and a provision that would empower the President to limit the outflow of capital and technology.

The labor supporters of the bill insist that multinationals deny jobs to Americans because, through subsidiaries, they seek out low-wage workers abroad.

Moreoever, by exporting technology that foreign countries might not develop on their own for years to come, they enable those countries to produce goods that are then exported to the United States, costing more domestic jobs.

The typical reply from supporters of multinationals is that too often labor leaders are inclined to look at the short-term effects of foreign investments, which they conctde are not entirely beneficial to Americans.

But, they argue, in the long run the economic boost given to foreign economies by the multinational cause countries to become better customers of U.S. exports, thus leading to more domestic jobs.

The differences of opinion on these and other effects of the multinational company are focused by the Hartke-Burke bill, hearings on which might conceivably produce an answer as to which argument is right.

by LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

A fellow traveling salesman came to my office and noticed that I was wearing a hearing aid. He said he had thrown his away after an operation for nerve deafness.

My own doctor here says there is no operation for nerve deafness. I would go anywhere in the country, even though I am 75, if an operation would help me.

Mr. T. R. M., S. C.

Dear Mr. M.: Your total confusion about surgery and deafness stems from a misunderstanding between you and your traveling friend. Actually, there is no operation for the cure of pure nerve deafness. Undoubtedly, his surgery was for a condition of deafness known as "otosclerosis." This is not nerve deafness.

This type of surgery is being performed by specially trained ear surgeons everywhere. There would be, therefore, no reason for you to travel to a distant area.

You can be sure that if your own ear doctor thought you were an ideal candidate for surgery, he would have suggested the operation.

No, there is not yet an operation for nerve deafness. And, be extremely wary of the pressure selling of some hearing-aid salesmen who say that they now have a new, spectacular, electronic hearing aid especially made for nerve deafness.

My little boy starts to sneeze and gets a runny nose whenever he is around a dog.

Is it possible to be allergic to dogs and what are some of the symptoms?

Mrs. S. W., Tex.

Dear Mrs. W.: You bet it is possible and you have just made the proper diagnosis. Your observation that he starts to sneeze and his nose runs pinpoints an allergic reaction.

Some children who are extremely allergic to dog hair and dog dander may also develop wheezing in their chests and itching of the eyes. Your best approach would be to separate your son from dogs as much as possible.

She is healthy and average size now. We worry that she will grow to be extremely tall or heavy because of her unusual birth size.

Dear Mrs. L.: The fact that your child's present weight is normal should relieve your anxiety. There is nothing to suggest that such a birth weight indicates any unusual developmental changes.

The Law Of The Sea

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Herbert Klein, the White House Director of Communications, gave an accounting recently in New York City of his fact-finding trip to Latin America. Much of his talk, made to a group assembled by the National Strategy Information Center, explored various interpretations of the "law of the sea," which can hardly be made uniform as long as some countries front on big open oceans and others face each other across narrow waters.

Ecuador, for example, has been picking up U. S. tuna fishing boats for invading the 200-mile limit which the Pacific Ocean nations in Latin America claim as their exclusive domain. Klein, who comes from San Diego, the home of many U. S. tuna boats, seemed to wince when he said he understood the feelings of the Ecuadoreans about the 200-mile offshore claim. "They feel that they have a law," he said, "and they want to protect it." But he added, quickly, the 200-mile law wouldn't do at all for the Mediterranean, or for the Caribbean, where many maritime nations are almost in sight of each other.

Mr. Klein hinted at a compromise interpretation of the "law of the sea" that would make it apply only to stationary natural resources such as offshore oil. The tuna, he sain, was an "international fish." But even the oil limitation won't do if you look at East Asia, where, as I heard it said during a recent trip to Japan and Taiwan, the potential riches of the China Sea would, if linked to a 200-mile standard, precipitate the next war.

Red China, Nationalist China and Japan are all busy asserting claim to islands and adjacent waters in or near the Ryuku chain. The Filipinos, with offshore claims of their own, might get into the act. For that matter, if oil were ever discovered to the north of Japan, there would be a natural controversy over interpretations of the 200-mile limit with Soviet Russia. The extreme cynics were saying that American bankers want to work out a deal with big international oil companies and the Red Chinese for exploring and exploitig offshore East Asiatic oil. But if this was in Nixon's or Kissinger's mind while the Peking trip was being planned, it is a secret that didn't get any mention.

Red China has assured Chile and Argentina that it backs their territorial sea rights. In doing this, Peking noted that Taiwan, which is only some 90 miles from the Chinese mainland, would come within the 200-mile interpretation of the "law of the sea." How the law would apply to Hongkong, a British crown colony, or to the Falkland Islands off the coast of Argentina, or how it would affect two other Red Chinese friends, Guyana and Cuba, is a mystery. Key West is just about the same distance from Havana as Taipei, the capital of Taiwan, is from the Red Chinese coastal city of Amoy, and Guyana's presumptive claims to offshore rights would quarrel with the similar claims of Trinidad.

There's no way of settling offshore rights save on a region-by-region basis, with compromises hammered out in conventions established by intricate trading. An international conventio allows all the atios to use such narrow waters as the Dardanelles, but Egypt tried to close the Strait of Tiran leading to the Israeli port of Eilat on the grounl that the Gulf of Eilat constituted an "internal" Arab lake.

The Dutch, the West Germans, the British and the Norwegians have managed to parcel out the North Sea gas and oil resources without flying at each other's throats. But can anyone visualize the Red Chinese, the Japanese and the Republic of China on Taiwan sitting down to determine he ownership of oil under the East China Sea?

Soviet Russia, which wants to fish everywhere and use the narrow waters of the Gulf of Finland, the Baltic, the Black Sea, the Mediterranean, the Red Sea and the Sea of Japan without inhibition or prejudice, would be vastly penalized by any interpretation of the "law of the sea" based on generalized mileage. So it isn't likely that maritime issues will ever be settled within the confines of the UN Security Council, where both Red China and the Soviets have vetoes.

If Herbert Klein couldn't offer any precision when talking about Latin American claims to offshore territorial rights, he did use words more meticulously than either Henry Kissinger or Richard Nixon when referring to our defense treaty with Taiwan. He said that no agreement had been reached with Peking that prejudiced our "treaty alliance with any other area."

The worn "area" would legitimatize the Taiwan treaty where the Nixon-Kissinger use of the word "province," or the phrase "integral part of China," had made critics wonder if a treaty made with "part of a country could have any validity in international law.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

We, the employes of the Service Dept. are writing this letter to notify you the reason why we walked off our our jobs at 9:20 a.m. March 27. Well, the reasons are as follows:

As city employes we are the lowest paid, the equipment is old and worn out and not safe to operate on the streets or anywhere else. Once a month the men that have Blue Cross insurance only draw a partial check because $28 goes out for the insurance and we all had to drop it because we couldn't make all our bills meet let alone buy food for our families.

We were told by our service director that there was money for our raises but the fire department and police department will get a raise also. Well the following two are covered by Civil Service and call strikes where we, the City Department can't because we wouldn't have a job and nobody would back us up and we are all on food stamps now. As citizens we would like to be able to better ourselves but on the money that we draw we can't.

All of us liked our jobs, but citizens, try to understand how we feel when we work and people call us ill names because of the way we are dressed but we don't make enough money to rent uniforms. We thought the city income tax would help us, but it hasn't so far. Maybe we don't understand the city laws because of schooling but if people would explain them we would be able to. Our service director told us to go to council and ask for a raise because he wasn't going. As citizens, do you think that is right?

Well citizens, there is just one or two more reasons and they are as follows: There is only five steady men and two of them are the foreman and the other one is a sweeper operator, so that cuts the men down to five to work on the streets and in the summer time there is just three men to work on the streets for three days because on Monday and Friday it takes two men to pick up trash uptown and the city park and Circleville is getting bigger all the time as we all know. If you don't believe these problems exist, please contact one of us.

30 YEARS AGO

Official reopening of St. Joseph's Catholic church school building, modernized and reconditioned in a $10,000 program, was set for March 17. The building, dedicated in 1886 by the Rt. Rev. James J. Hartley was used for school and recreational purposes. The congregation began in 1941 a program to provide a new roof, new heating plant, toilets, hardwood floors, paneled ceiling, painting and decorating.

J. F. Dumond, retired rural letter carrier and teacher, died at the age of 82 in his Fairfield County home. Dumond served as a rural carrier on the Basil route for 25 years. Earlier he taught for 25 years in Fairfield, Pickaway and Ross County schools.

City officials noted with satisfaction the new parking meters in the downtown area. First collection from the meters totaled $85.07 plus three slugs, two dimes and a button.

Lightning struck the barn of Clarence Stout, three miles west of Commercial Point, burning the structure to the ground.

Tenderloin sirloin steaks sold for 35 cents, rib roast 30 cents and chuck roast 25 cents a pound at the Kroger Store. In a drive to conserve paper, the grocery offered strong shopping bags for 2 cents each that could be used for months of shopping. And if the old one wore out, Krogers promised to replace it for any shopper who returned the old one.

Circleville's first rifle match with a group from out of the city was held at the City Hall range with Chillicothe shooters. Qualifying for Circleville's team were Jim Cook with a perfect 300 score, Tom E. Wilson, Elmon Richards, Cecil Noecker, Merle Thornton, Luther Bower, James Shea and Fred Boggs.

Fingerprinting employes of Circleville who work in defense industries was one program underway at the police department. All employes of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co., Container Corporation and Eshelman firm were all having prints made. Maizo Mills, Circleville's only 100 per cent war industry, had yet to consider an employe fingerprinting program.

Ohio's State Fair was not held in 1942. All plans were canceled for the 93rd annual agricultural fair after Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson notified the governor that the entire facilities of the fairgrounds were urgently needed by the air force command for handling of airplane parts and equipment.

Croman's Hatchery of Circleville won outstanding honors in the Ohio State University baby chick show. Sterley Croman, operator of the hatchery, won first place with his entires in the white and barred rock classes, no small achievement.

Editorially Speaking . . .

Cambodian Turnabout

Democracy comes in many forms. Some of them are so shapeless that democratic institutions can be turned off at will. Cambodia now belongs to this group.

In one move, Lon Nol, Cambodia's leader, discharged a constituent assembly and placed himself in absolute power over the besieged country. If official titles have any importance, Lon Nol now has them all, including commander of the armed forces.

The constitution which the assembly had nearly completed now is a piece of worthless paper. The policies and freedoms in Cambodia are whatever Lon Nol says they are. Yet the West cannot be entirely unsympathetic to the distress which drove Lon Nol to his extreme acts against democracy.

The war in Cambodia has been going poorly. In the last two years large areas of the country hve been seized by the communists. Invasions of allied troops to try to help the inefficient Cambodian forces are common. One third of the people have lost their homes. Not exactly conditions for business as usual.

Organized Wheelers

What bicyclists need to protect their interests is a national organization patterned after the AAA. So says the Bicycle Club of America, with headquarters in Burbank, Calif .

Now even the cyclists — those symbols of free-wheeling independence — are being organized.

To start with, the club contends national registration of bicycles would help reduce the millions which are stolen every year. That's right, millions.

No one knows the actual total, but 400,000 were reported lost in California alone last year.

A computer matches bike serial numbers, local license numbers and a club identifying number for each member. Phones have been installed to accept toll-free calls from either finders or losers of bicycles.

With a national setup like that, the junior underworld set of bicycle thief rings hasn't got a chance.

The Business World

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) -- There is one criticism of multinational companies on which critic and advocate agree: Very real problems are posed for small nations by the presence within their borders of huge foreign corporations.

There, it seems, agreement ends. One side argues that such companies are extremely sensitive and submissive to policies of their host country. Others contend that the guest can and likely will rough up the host.

But this is only a minor disagreement compared with the issue of jobs. Do U.S. companies with subsidiaries abroad cause jobs to be lost domestically? Or perhaps do they generate jobs at home? Opinions are numerous as nations.

In his book, "The Age of Discontinuity," published in 1969, Peter Drucker states:

"Every dollar invested in a subsidiary abroad lends too many dollars of American exports within a very short time, in addition to a flow of dividends. In fact, investment abroad during the last 20 years has fueled full employment in the United States . . . . "

But talk to a union leader and he will quote studies suggesting that between 1966 and 1969 the U.S. multinational corporations cost domestic workers 500,000 job opportunities.

The disagreement is of vital interest for two reasons:

—First, U.S. companies make up the preponderance of multinational firms, which now produce goods and services at the rate of $500 billion a year.

—Second, the Hartke-Burke bill, officially known as "The Foreign Trade and Investment Act of 1972" although it is still uncertain whether hearings will be held this year, seeks to limit the power of multinationals.

Specifically, the bill seeks a quota on U.S. imports, a limit on U.S. private investments abroad, and a provision that would empower the President to limit the outflow of capital and technology.

The labor supporters of the bill insist that multinationals deny jobs to Americans because, through subsidiaries, they seek out low-wage workers abroad.

Moreoever, by exporting technology that foreign countries might not develop on their own for years to come, they enable those countries to produce goods that are then exported to the United States, costing more domestic jobs.

The typical reply from supporters of multinationals is that too often labor leaders are inclined to look at the short-term effects of foreign investments, which they conctde are not entirely beneficial to Americans.

But, they argue, in the long run the economic boost given to foreign economies by the multinational cause countries to become better customers of U.S. exports, thus leading to more domestic jobs.

The differences of opinion on these and other effects of the multinational company are focused by the Hartke-Burke bill, hearings on which might conceivably produce an answer as to which argument is right.

Key West is just about the same distance from Havana as Taipei, the capital of Taiwan, is from the Red Chinese coastal city of Amoy, and Guyana's presumptive claims to offshore rights would quarrel with the similar claims of Trinidad.

There's no way of settling offshore rights save on a region-by-region basis, with compromises hammered out in conventions established by intricate trading. An international conventio allows all the atios to use such narrow waters as the Dardanelles, but Egypt tried to close the Strait of Tiran leading to the Israeli port of Eilat on the grounl that the Gulf of Eilat constituted an "internal" Arab lake.

The Dutch, the West Germans, the British and the Norwegians have managed to parcel out the North Sea gas and oil resources without flying at each other's throats. But can anyone visualize the Red Chinese, the Japanese and the Republic of China on Taiwan sitting down to determine he ownership of oil under the East China Sea?

Soviet Russia, which wants to fish everywhere and use the narrow waters of the Gulf of Finland, the Baltic, the Black Sea, the Mediterranean, the Red Sea and the Sea of Japan without inhibition or prejudice, would be vastly penalized by any interpretation of the "law of the sea" based on generalized mileage. So it isn't likely that maritime issues will ever be settled within the confines of the UN Security Council, where both Red China and the Soviets have vetoes.

If Herbert Klein couldn't offer any precision when talking about Latin American claims to offshore territorial rights, he did use words more meticulously than either Henry Kissinger or Richard Nixon when referring to our defense treaty with Taiwan. He said that no agreement had been reached with Peking that prejudiced our "treaty alliance with any other area."

The worn "area" would legitimatize the Taiwan treaty where the Nixon-Kissinger use of the word "province," or the phrase "integral part of China," had made critics wonder if a treaty made with "part of a country could have any validity in international law.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

We, the employes of the Service Dept. are writing this letter to notify you the reason why we walked off our our jobs at 9:20 a.m. March 27. Well, the reasons are as follows:

As city employes we are the lowest paid, the equipment is old and worn out and not safe to operate on the streets or anywhere else. Once a month the men that have Blue Cross insurance only draw a partial check because $28 goes out for the insurance and we all had to drop it because we couldn't make all our bills meet let alone buy food for our families.

We were told by our service director that there was money for our raises but the fire department and police department will get a raise also. Well the following two are covered by Civil Service and call strikes where we, the City Department can't because we wouldn't have a job and nobody would back us up and we are all on food stamps now. As citizens we would like to be able to better ourselves but on the money that we draw we can't.

All of us liked our jobs, but citizens, try to understand how we feel when we work and people call us ill names because of the way we are dressed but we don't make enough money to rent uniforms. We thought the city income tax would help us, but it hasn't so far. Maybe we don't understand the city laws because of schooling but if people would explain them we would be able to. Our service director told us to go to council and ask for a raise because he wasn't going. As citizens, do you think that is right?

Well citizens, there is just one or two more reasons and they are as follows: There is only five steady men and two of them are the foreman and the other one is a sweeper operator, so that cuts the men down to five to work on the streets and in the summer time there is just three men to work on the streets for three days because on Monday and Friday it takes two men to pick up trash uptown and the city park and Circleville is getting bigger all the time as we all know. If you don't believe these problems exist, please contact one of us.

30 YEARS AGO

Official reopening of St. Joseph's Catholic church school building, modernized and reconditioned in a $10,000 program, was set for March 17. The building, dedicated in 1886 by the Rt. Rev. James J. Hartley was used for school and recreational purposes. The congregation began in 1941 a program to provide a new roof, new heating plant, toilets, hardwood floors, paneled ceiling, painting and decorating.

J. F. Dumond, retired rural letter carrier and teacher, died at the age of 82 in his Fairfield County home. Dumond served as a rural carrier on the Basil route for 25 years. Earlier he taught for 25 years in Fairfield, Pickaway and Ross County schools.

City officials noted with satisfaction the new parking meters in the downtown area. First collection from the meters totaled $85.07 plus three slugs, two dimes and a button.

Lightning struck the barn of Clarence Stout, three miles west of Commercial Point, burning the structure to the ground.

Tenderloin sirloin steaks sold for 35 cents, rib roast 30 cents and chuck roast 25 cents a pound at the Kroger Store. In a drive to conserve paper, the grocery offered strong shopping bags for 2 cents each that could be used for months of shopping. And if the old one wore out, Krogers promised to replace it for any shopper who returned the old one.

Circleville's first rifle match with a group from out of the city was held at the City Hall range with Chillicothe shooters. Qualifying for Circleville's team were Jim Cook with a perfect 300 score, Tom E. Wilson, Elmon Richards, Cecil Noecker, Merle Thornton, Luther Bower, James Shea and Fred Boggs.

Fingerprinting employes of Circleville who work in defense industries was one program underway at the police department. All employes of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co., Container Corporation and Eshelman firm were all having prints made. Maizo Mills, Circleville's only 100 per cent war industry, had yet to consider an employe fingerprinting program.

Ohio's State Fair was not held in 1942. All plans were canceled for the 93rd annual agricultural fair after Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson notified the governor that the entire facilities of the fairgrounds were urgently needed by the air force command for handling of airplane parts and equipment.

Croman's Hatchery of Circleville won outstanding honors in the Ohio State University baby chick show. Sterley Croman, operator of the hatchery, won first place with his entires in the white and barred rock classes, no small achievement.

Dr. Delgado, Professor of Physiology at Yale, has focused his research on the relationship of brain physiology and behavior. Some of his more startling discoveries are that mental activities such as fear, pleasure, and pain can be induced, inhibited or modified by direct stimulation of the brain. His research has led to new and creative approaches to the treatment of mental disturbances, epilepsy, and brain surgery. Teachers from this area selected as Jennings Scholars this year are Edward Holmes, and Mrs. Janet Baker of Westfall, Miss Amy Miga, Mrs. Carol R. Mader and Walter T. Sales of Circleville and Mrs. Virginia Boyer of Teays Valley.

Ohio Voter Requirement Challenged

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Secretary of State Ted Brown welcomed Thursday a federal court suit questioning the constitutionality of Ohio's six-month residency requirement for voter registration.

Brown noted he already had asked the attorney general for an opinion on the requirement because "we weren't certain" of the status of the Ohio situation after the U.S. Supreme Court tossed out Tennessee's one-year residency minimum.

The scretary of state said he personally believes the six-month requirement, reduced from one year by a recent constitutional amendment, should stand up.

"I think most people think that if it goes to 30 days it's not enough time to police the people," he said.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Ohio filed the suit Thursday in U.S. District Court here. The ACLU cited the U.S. Supreme Court ruling in asking for a restraining order.

An ACLU spokesman said the suit was filed to permit affected voters to register by next Monday's registration deadline for the May 2 primary.

Brown and members of the Franklin County Board of Elections were named as defendants.

Plaintiffs are Leonard and Sandy Schwartz, who moved to Columbus from Texas in February. Schwartz is an ACLU lawyer.

GM Contracts For Natural Gas

LORDSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — General Motors Corp., which was forced to suspend operations at its plant here two years ago because of a gas shortage, is turning to nearby wells to supplement its normal gas supply.

GM has contracted to buy 900 million cubic feet of gas a year from the wells to supply its assembly division and Fisher Body plants at Lordstown, its Terex Division plant at Hudson and the Packard Electric Division plant at Warren.

Charles T. Koval, president of Atlas Resources, a Delaware firm which is drilling the wells, said at the current market price of 65-75 cents per thousand cubic feet, the contract would be worth between $58.5 to $67.5 million yearly.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hal Roach Jr., 53, one-time motion-picture producer who owned Hal Roach Studios, died Wednesday. Roach's father and the late comedian Harold Lloyd formed the studio in 1919 and it operated until its bankruptcy in 1959. The younger Roach produced a number of television series in recent years.

Donations From Strangers Help Rebuild Family Dream

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A barn and goat herd which were destroyed in a fire March 3, are being rebuilt by donations of friends and sympathetic strangers from across the nation.

The fire, which firemen say may have been arson, struck just a week before Glenn and Sara Currier, both 30, were scheduled to get their Grade A dairy license for their farm in rural Oakland County.

The barn sheltering some 60 nannies and all the milking equipment was lost, and with it a 10-year-old dream of returning to a country life.

But the Curriers didn't count on the generosity of their neighbors and of people who read about the Associated Press account of their loss.

Since the fire they have received more than $2,000 in donations.

"It has been such a different experience," said Mrs. Currier. "It's really hard to say the good things we feel."

Thursday a new barn was under construction, paid for by donations.

Saturday neighbors will get together to dismantle another small barn, also donated, and move it to the Currier's farm.

Earlier this week a group of high school students gave the Curriers $150 which they raised at a bagel and sucker sale at school.

"And, could you believe it?" Mrs. Currier asked. "A class of fourth graders in Georgia sold candy and they sent a $50 check to our 11-year-old daughter Becky to buy a goat to replace one she lost. They are just great!"

Persons from across the nation have donated 15 goats to help start a new herd.

The Curriers said they plan to be back in the goat dairy business by fall.

Solon Hits Bill Coverage

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — News coverage of the criminal code bill before the legislature placed too much emphasis on sex law aspects, Rep. Alan E. Norris complained Thursday.

"The plain truth of the matter is that the sex crimes sections take up only 14 pages of a 266-page comprehensive criminal code," the Westerville Republican said.

Under the measure, which passed the House last week, such offenses as adultry, homosexuality and fornication would be removed from the criminal statutes.

Norris said recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings prohibit criminal prosecution in the three areas if the violations are made in private by consenting adults.

He noted that penalties for those acts are retained under the bill if there is force or coercion, or if they are committed in public.

Sadat Says U.S. Contacts Resumed

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt said Thursday that contacts with the United States have been resumed.

In a speech to pilots of an air base in the Delta, Sadat promised to unveil next week the details of recent U.S.-Egyptian communications, the Middle East News Agency reported.

The full report is to be presented to parliament members at a special session, Sadat said.

A dispatch in the authoritative newspaper Al Ahram last Friday claimed there had been a recent exchange of messages between the United States and Egypt.

Sadat said in a speech last November that he had severed contacts with the United States.

On Thursday, Sadat said military confrontation with Israel has become inevitable, but he added that building Egypt's home front required some time to make it capable of sustaining an expected 1,200 to 1,300 Israeli air raids daily.

Bus March Participants Exhausted

CARROLLTON, Ohio (AP)—Mrs. Irene McCabe and her four antibusing housewives from Pontiac, Mich., rested Thursday night in a farmhouse in Malvern, just west of here, after advancing 13 miles during the day.

Mrs. McCabe, saying "my right toe's killing me" told the Associated Press she was about ready "to collapse."

"We couldn't get accommodations to hook up our house trailer," Mrs. McCabe said. "But a farmer near Malvern offered to put us up overnight." She said the marchers would continue their trek to Washington about 9:30 a.m. today and hope to reach Carrollton, the center of Carroll County and 17 miles away.

The determined housewife, who is protesting busing of school children, said the terrain is steeper at this point and exhausting.

"We're going uphill, but we'll continue until we fall," said Mrs. McCabe, admitting that "working would be easier" right now than walking.

During her Thursday walk, Mrs. McCabe submitted to a question-and-answer period in Canton and met Massillon mayor Mark Ross.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Joyce Brothers, almost any day now, will turn up on ABC's soap opera, "One Life to Live," playing herself. She will help one of the series' suffering characters overcome an anxiety neurosis.

Dr. Brothers has never acted before—learned lines and responded to direction. But becuse of her frequnt appearances on radio and television, when she arrives on the soap scene it will be, for women, just like the arrival of the cavalry in a Western.

Joyce Brothers, a psychologist graduated from Columbia University, has spent more time talking into microphones than directly to patients.

Her day starts early, with a live 60 minute broadcast on a New York City radio station where she has telephone conversations with people with problems. She also has taped daily program heard on radio around the nation, and appears twice weekly on NBC's "Monitor." Once a month she is a guest on CBS television's "Captain Kangaroo."

"There we take up children's problems," she explained. "I talk to puppets who are really surrogate children."

She also writes seven columns a week for newspapers, knocks out a column for a monthly women's magazine and turns out an occasional self-help book. She lectures and even serves as a consultant to business firms.

This still leaves time for a happy homelife and for occasional guest appearances on late night talk shows and on variety shows.

"I never have to prepare ahead for the talk shows," she said. "The host just asks me questions about human relations and I answer. Sometimes I've been called at the very last minute when a schadued guest has not appeared. But I always appear on television as myself—I even did on 'the Dean Martin Show."

A slight blonde, she is the wife of Dr. Milton Brothers, an internist. Their only child, Lisa, is a premed student at Princeton.

"My husband is as busy as I am and does not restrict me at all," she reported over a luncheon plate of spaghetti. "And since we are likely to eat at strange hours, I'm a very good short-order cook."

She keeps voluminous files, cross-indexed for quick reference, and she reads a lot in her field—"I'm a rapid reader, about 3,500 words a minute." She has a couple of part-time helpers to sort her mail, but that is about it.

Dr. Brothers believes she is serving as effectively as any of her fellows, even appearing in a soap opera.

"The character, in trouble, is shown getting professional help," she said. "That, right there, is a plus."

Kennedy Center To Reopen Minus 'Souvenir' Items

By DONALD SANDERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After being closed to tourists for the past 3½ months, the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts welcomes them again today minus some prime attractions for souvenir hunters.

Security is being stepped up. But center officials insist that vandalism, which marred the opening months of the national cultural center on the bank of the Potomac River, was not the major reason for its closing last Dec. 11.

A few attractions, like the chandeliers in the elevators, have been removed. They proved particularly tempting to visitors for their souvenir value, even though they are made of cheap glass unlike some of the valuable crystal fixtures elsewhere in the huge marble structure.

There were other losses to souvenir hunters: knobs from washbasins, pieces of drapery and of carpeting.

The National Park Police, with responsibility for security in the center, says it will augment its force in the grand foyer and in other public areas of the building.

When Chairman Roger L. Stevens of the center's board of trustees announced the closing last December, he ascribed the decision primarily to inaction by Congress on his request for funds to support memorial aspects of the building.

Stevens argued that it was unfair to ask the center's box-office patrons to support the John F. Kennedy memorial aspects, when such monuments as the Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial are maintained by tax funds.

Congress has not yet voted the $1.5 million he asked for this purpose, but approval within the next few months seems assured. The Nixon administration is backing the center's request.

As the center reopens, there will not be fully guided tours.

"Visitors will have access to all public areas and the theaters, rehearsal and performance schedules permitting," said the center's director of public affairs, Edward Mattos. "Volunteers will be available to answer visitors' questions and give information about the center."

For the past 3½ months, persons not having tickets to performances in the center's three major halls could walk through the foyer and visit its restaurants during the evening but were not permitted in the concert hall, the opera house and the Eisenhower Theater.

A bit o' this and o' that is now among the new titles in the library. Everyone should find something to his taste in the books noted briefly below.

Flamboyant and colorful, "Miss Talullah Bankhead" stood out from any background. Daughter and granddaughter of highly successful politicians, she neither used their reputations to her own ends nor hid her strong family ties. Lee Israel has produced a well-researched biography of the famous actress, telling as much as, or even slightly more than the average reader cares to know about the subject. Yet because she was a great celebrity, well known in several drama media, this new title will no doubt be extremely popular.

"The Romantic Englishwoman" is very romantic indeed, even to excess. This new novel by Thomas Wiseman, author of "The Quick and the Dead" must be read, not for its story-surface, but for hidden meaning. It is really about today's woman and her search for identity which can change from romanticism to sexuality.

Followers of Robert Penn Warren will recognize his familiar style in "Meet Me in the Green Glen." Laid in the Kentucky backwoods, the story is about lonely people, caught in webs they in no way created. Mr. Warren is a master writer, as testified by the long list of prose and poetry awards he has won. Yet readers should be prepared for both the concealed and open violence of his narrative, compelling as always.

Shivery, spooky, "The Crying Child" is one of the scariest Gothics to come along in quite a while. All its characters hear the piteous cry — of a child long dead! Are supernatural farces at work? Most readers will believe so. Barbara Michaels has six other titles in the library. She writes under two other names: Barbara Mertz and Barbara Peters.

Navy wives, in WW II, had to expect the worst. "Of Love Remembered" is about just such a girl, one who never really understood the "navy way" but remained her even inviolate self. She survived, as most of them did, the adjustment to naval protocol, the worrisome hours when her husband was at sea, and, finally, the war itself. Ethel Delston wrote this nostalgic love story.

"Toil and Trouble" is a history of American labor. This is the second edition of this rather heavy book, the first having been published in 1964. Of notable interest are references to labor leaders such as Walter Reuther, George Meany, and James Hoffa.

With a scholarly approach, Alexander De Conde presents the background of American foreign policy. He begins his book with theory, then develops his theme by discussing Jeffersonian diplomacy, the evalution of the Monroe Doctrine, the Open Door and the Big Stick, and finally, the emergence of Afro-Asian nationalism. "A History of American Foreign Policy" is a big book, augmented by maps, charts, and illustrations.

A bit o' this and o' that is now among the new titles in the library. Everyone should find something to his taste in the books noted briefly below.

Flamboyant and colorful, "Miss Talullah Bankhead" stood out from any background. Daughter and granddaughter of highly successful politicians, she neither used their reputations to her own ends nor hid her strong family ties. Lee Israel has produced a well-researched biography of the famous actress, telling as much as, or even slightly more than the average reader cares to know about the subject. Yet because she was a great celebrity, well known in several drama media, this new title will no doubt be extremely popular.

"The Romantic Englishwoman" is very romantic indeed, even to excess. This new novel by Thomas Wiseman, author of "The Quick and the Dead" must be read, not for its story-surface, but for hidden meaning. It is really about today's woman and her search for identity which can change from romanticism to sexuality.

Bolivian Government Ousts 119 Russians

LA PAZ (AP) — Bolivia's right-wing military government has ordered 119 Soviet Embassy personnel out of the country after implying the mission was financing leftist rebel movements.

It is the largest such contingent expelled from any country in recent memory. Last September, Britain kicked out 105 Russians after a defecting soviet agent blew the lid on a spy network.

Magazine Sees Hike In Steel Production

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Iron Age magazine says domestic steel production could run as high as 8.2 million tons in March, signaling a turnaround for the nation's steelmakers and possibly indicating an upswing for American business in general.

A marked increase in steel consumption by industrial markets was cited by Iron Age as one of the contributing factors to the current surge in steel orders. The other, the publication said, was that customers have stopped liquidating inventories and have begun to rebuild them.

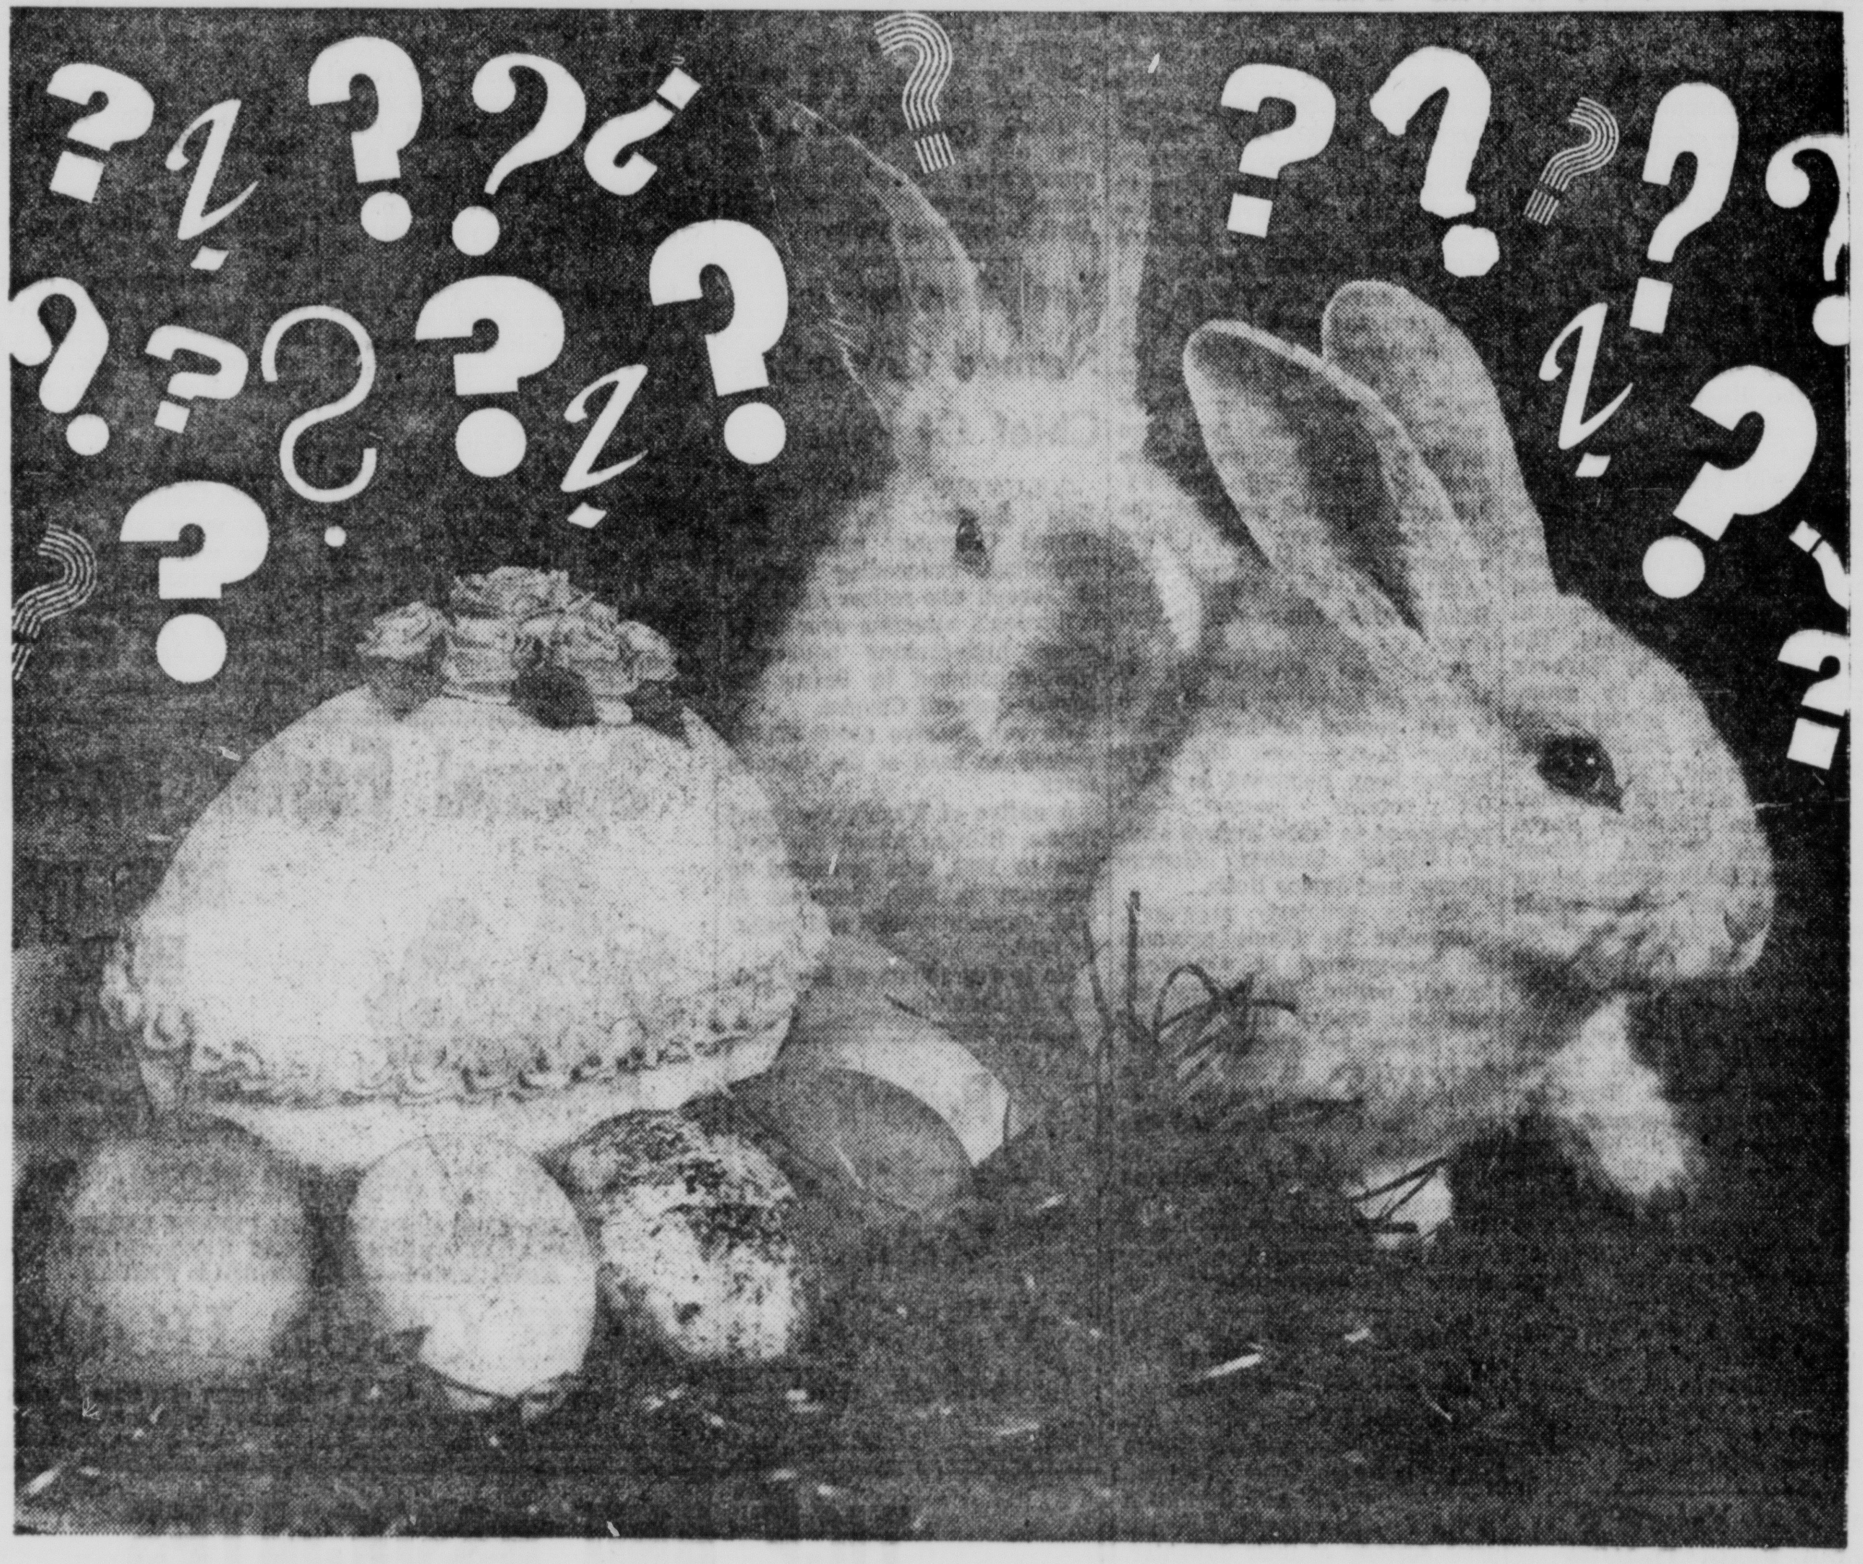
Consumer Group Seeks Air Fare Penalty Payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer action group Thursday accused the nation's major air carriers of failing to provide adequate on-time service and urged the Civil Aeronautics Board to require cash payments to passengers whose flights are delayed.

The penalty payments, proposed in a petition by the Aviation Consumer Action Project, would be equal to the ticket price for canceled flights and $25 for every half hour flights are late taking off or landing.

K.G.J. Pillai, executive director of the Ralph Nader-sponsored group, said his review of airlines' on-time filings with the CAB showed 26 per cent of the flights on the nation's 200 busiest routes were 15 minutes or more late in 1970.

The airlines performed 809-825 flights on those routes in 1970 and cancelled 28,056 of them, said Pillai's petition. He estimated 1.5 million to 2 mi-ion passengers were affected by the cancellatons alone.



"What is Easter, Mommy?"

"Is it the time when bunnies get born?" I looked at my little daughter, appalled.

Did she really think of Easter in terms of sugared eggs, fluffy bunnies and pretty candies? Had I given her the impression that for grownups Easter is a time for new clothes, flowered hats and fragrant corsages? Surely, at some time, I must have told her the real story of Easter. Or had I?

I was really flabbergasted at my negligence — it took my little daughter to make me realize it. I dismissed my house chores and sat down right then to tell her the glorious Easter story of the Resurrection. I told her what hope this event brought for all of mankind — with its promise of eternal life.

I might add that the next week I enrolled my daughter in church school. And my husband and I started attending church again. We haven't missed a Sunday since.

Bolivian Government Ousts 119 Russians

LA PAZ (AP) — Bolivia's right-wing military government has ordered 119 Soviet Embassy personnel out of the country after implying the mission was financing leftist rebel movements.

It is the largest such contingent expelled from any country in recent memory. Last September, Britain kicked out 105 Russians after a defecting soviet agent blew the lid on a spy network.

Magazine Sees Hike In Steel Production

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Iron Age magazine says domestic steel production could run as high as 8.2 million tons in March, signaling a turnaround for the nation's steelmakers and possibly indicating an upswing for American business in general.

A marked increase in steel consumption by industrial markets was cited by Iron Age as one of the contributing factors to the current surge in steel orders. The other, the publication said, was that customers have stopped liquidating inventories and have begun to rebuild them.

Consumer Group Seeks Air Fare Penalty Payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer action group Thursday accused the nation's major air carriers of failing to provide adequate on-time service and urged the Civil Aeronautics Board to require cash payments to passengers whose flights are delayed.

The penalty payments, proposed in a petition by the Aviation Consumer Action Project, would be equal to the ticket price for canceled flights and $25 for every half hour flights are late taking off or landing.

K.G.J. Pillai, executive director of the Ralph Nader-sponsored group, said his review of airlines' on-time filings with the CAB showed 26 per cent of the flights on the nation's 200 busiest routes were 15 minutes or more late in 1970.

The airlines performed 809-825 flights on those routes in 1970 and cancelled 28,056 of them, said Pillai's petition. He estimated 1.5 million to 2 mi ion passengers were affected by the cancellatons alone.

"What is Easter, Mommy?"

"Is it the time when bunnies get born?" I looked at my little daughter, appalled.

Did she really think of Easter in terms of sugared eggs, fluffy bunnies and pretty candies? Had I given her the impression that for grownups Easter is a time for new clothes, flowered hats and fragrant corsages? Surely, at some time, I must have told her the real story of Easter. Or had I?

I was really flabbergasted at my negligence — it took my little daughter to make me realize it. I dismissed my house chores and sat down right then to tell her the glorious Easter story of the Resurrection. I told her what hope this event brought for all of mankind — with its promise of eternal life.

I might add that the next week I enrolled my daughter in church school. And my husband and I started attending church again We haven't missed a Sunday since.

The Red and Black

WIN ELECTION — Pat Curry, Bill Halstenberg, Sherry Mueller and Debbie Radabaugh show smiles after they were named winners of the student vote for council officers. Pat will manage student council funds as treasurer, while Bill and Sherry, as president and vice president respectively, provide management. Debbie was promoted from her present office as projects chairman to the secretary post.

Results Known On Council Vote

By CAROL HODGES

Once again the student body has chosen officers for Student Council and by the power of the vote. Three hundred sixty-one sophomores and juniors made the choice of leaders for next year's student body.

Newly elected president is Bill Halstenberg. Bill plans to work for the good of the students, serving them in the best way possible. One of his main goals is to "pull the classes together." He also would like to see the student lounge returned.

Bill is active in Stooge Club and is a member of NHS. He has a job with the Herald in the afternoons.

More students voted for the office of vice-president than any other position. The close contest proved Sherry Mueller to be the victor. Her reaction was one of complete surprise.

Sherry is active in Curtain Callers and 4-H. She recently moved here from Texas. One of her goals for Student Council is some system of open lunch.

"We have to carry out the responsibility the students expect from us." The comment was from Debbie Radabaugh who is to be the new secretary. Debbie is presently projects chairman of the Student Council and SCOL olympics committee member. GAA keeps her busy, along with 40 gold fish for the prom.

The next treasurer has experience as this year's Jr. Class treasurer and also held the office in 4-H. She is Pat Currie. When asked her reaction to being elected to her new position, Pat exclaimed "Wow!"

CHS has chosen its leaders. We wish them a good year and lots of luck.

Marked by the largest squad ever to try out, 52, a record crowd of 2,000 attended the Circleville - Lancaster football game.

Virgil Cress was the Stooge adviser and golf coach.

The Red and Black staff consisted of eleven students and the publication appeared weekly as a part of the Saturday evening edition of the Herald.

"Death Takes a Holiday" was the Senior Class Play."

Students glued on sideburns, bustled hoop skirts, straightened high hats and pulled at tight collars and the Junior Class of CHS produced "Little Women."

In March, the Poetry Club and EMS entertained their members and guests at a St. Patrick's Day dance.

Robert Gaylord Brown was president of the Senior Class of 71 students.

Senior DE Student Rates First In State As Winner

By LYN JACOBS

The Senior Class of CHS has added another to its list of "firsts."

At the 28th Annual State Leadership Conference Awards Banquet of DECA, held in Columbus last Friday and Saturday, Debbie Dumm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dumm, 1033 Mulberry Road, became the first girl in Ohio to be the recipient of the first place trophy for radio advertising.

Debbie, employed as secretary for Elsea, Inc., first competed in contests within District 17 and by placing first became eligible to enter this state competition. She was the victor over the 50 studens who competed in the field of radio advertising from the total of 1,100 DECA students vying for state titles.

As a result of this honor Debbie will attend the national leadership conference in Los Angeles, Calif. in May, being a voting delegate for the state of Ohio.

Receiving an honorable mention in the same field was Tom Tatman, a junior at CHS. The two CHS chapters were also awarded honorable mentions for outstanding DECA chapters in 1972.

Others attending the conference last weekend, where Debbie was the only person from District 17 to be honored at the banquet, were Martha Moore, chapter of the year II; Patty Ogan, chapter of the year I; Shirley Moody, current marketing; Dale Davis, income tax; Herb Poling, investments; Tracy Ferguson, free enterprise; Mary Alice Greenwood and Bill Rosengarten, advisers.

ACHIEVEMENT — Debbie Dumm, seated with trophy, became the first Ohio girl to receive the first place trophy for radio advertising in the DECA state contest. With Debbie are other Circleville DECA students Shirley Moody, Patty Ogan, Becky McCoy, adviser Mary Alice Greenwood, Dale Davis, Tom Tatman, Herb Poling, Martha Moore, Tracy Ferguson and adviser Bill Rosengarten.

When asked her opinion of CHS, Kathy replied, "It's bigger than Westfall and the kids are real friendly, but I still miss Westfall." She also stated that she thought the biggest difference between the schools was the teachers.

DE Student Of The Week

TRACY FERGUSON

By LYN JACOBS

Recognized by the Red and Black staff this week is DECA student Tracy Ferguson who lives with Rev. and Mrs. Melvin Maxwell at 501 E. Ohio St.

Employed by Sears, Roebuck and Co., Tracy works as telephone sales girl, answering the telephone, taking messages, and doing sales promotion for special items. She works from 12-30 hours a week depending on sales volume and has found the job helpful in meeting people and learning how to talk to them. She feels she has also learned a great deal about the value of different merchandise.

Tracy obtained her job after learning about the vacancy from one of the DE coordinators, then following this up by going for an interview and taking tests for the job.

Besides enabling her to have this job, Tracy has found that DECA has helped her by teaching proper grooming, appropriate business dress, store loyalty and the results of being honest.

After graduation, Tracy plans to be married and later study journalism. DECA has helped her to decide that she would also like to own and operate a bookstore.

Abusing The Vote

AN EDITORIAL

By Mike Chelikowsky

The American people have the unique privilege of voting. They can vote for or against a bill, pick the best candidate, but the latter of the powers of vote is too often abused.

Voting is how Americans as citizens can change things in the United States. It is our privilege and right to get our ideas across. Americans pick their representatives and get bills through. Voting is how America is changed.

Stay-at-home voters have no excuse for not putting their X on a ballot. Citizens complain about the way one official runs things; voting is how things are changed. Get out and vote for whom you think would do the best job.

Voting is extended to all aspects of our democratic oriented life, especially in schools. Many times school elections turn into popularity contests. In my opinion, this is the worst abuse of the voting privilege. The most populuar person in school does not deserve a class or Student Council office just because he is well-known or well-liked.

The person best qualified and most interested should be the person to win. The most popular person may also be the best qualified, but still the vote should go to the best qualified.

Even in schools the percentage of non-voters is too high. Twenty percent of the juniors and sophomores did not express themselves in the recent Student Council elections. Some were absent, but most just did not care or were scared.

Another bad habit acquired by the student body is the voting of only certain offices. A voter enters the voting booth and only votes for one office. In recent elections each executive office of Student Council lacked the total of 361 votes (president, 356; vice-presidnt, 351; treasurer, 350; secretary, 351). This cuts down on the other candidates possible votes. Only voting for one or two offices causes the other offices to be short votes which could mean the difference in an election.

In my mind, I see students not voting for the best possible candidates but running a popularity contest. Where do these ideas of not voting and not knowing the candidates come from. Home?

Eeveryone has the chance to vote; know your candidates and issues; pick the best. It's your country and school, and we can change it. Or is it always going to be true that "good guys finish last?"

Coach Treats Football Team

By CRAIG ALLISON

Last November some forty football players hung up their football cleats and helmets, and put away their pants and jerseys, and everybody thought football season was over.

And it was, in one sense. But part of every football season are the banquets. Three days after the season ended, the boys who were selected to the All-SCOL football team were treated to a dinner at Washington Senior High School in Washington Court House.

A week later the Kiwanis Club of Circleville entertained the football letterman at the Mecca Restaurant. Two days after that, the Booster Club of Circleville High School entertained the fall sports teams and cheerleaders at the high school.

One would think that after this the football team would not want to look at food. But being red-blooded boys, they willfully attended a banquet at David's Buffet in Columbus. This group was made up of those boys who missed no more than six workouts during the summer. Being buffet style, the boys ate until they were quite satisfied. They ate everything from frog legs to roast beef and from jello-salad to tossed salad.

A special note of thanks is in order. The boys, coaches and their wives were given this magnificent banquet by Coach Williams, who paid for everything out of his own pocket.

Circleville's baseball stars of the Junior Class are Merv Taylor, Ozie England, Scoop Hoskins, Mitch Mogan, and Gates Truex.

Seniors have thirty-four days of school left.

Did everyone figure out how to work the voting machines?

WIN ELECTION — Pat Curry, Bill Halstenberg, Sherry Mueller and Debbie Radabaugh show smiles after they were named winners of the student vote for council officers. Pat will manage student council funds as treasurer, while Bill and Sherry, as president and vice president respectively, provide management. Debbie was promoted from her present office as projects chairman to the secretary post.

Results Known On Council Vote

By CAROL HODGES

Once again the student body has chosen officers for Student Council and by the power of the vote. Three hundred sixty-one sophomores and juniors made the choice of leaders for next year's student body.

Newly elected president is Bill Halstenberg. Bill plans to work for the good of the students, serving them in the best way possible. One of his main goals is to "pull the classes together." He also would like to see the student lounge returned.

Bill is active in Stooge Club and is a member of NHS. He has a job with the Herald in the afternoons.

More students voted for the office of vice-president than any other position. The close contest proved Sherry Mueller to be the victor. Her reaction was one of complete surprise.

Sherry is active in Curtain Callers and 4-H. She recently moved here from Texas. One of her goals for Student Council is some system of open lunch.

"We have to carry out the responsibility the students expect from us." The comment was from Debbie Radabaugh who is to be the new secretary. Debbie is presently projects chairman of the Student Council and SCOL olympics committee member. GAA keeps her busy, along with 40 gold fish for the prom.

The next treasurer has experience as this year's Jr. Class treasurer and also held the office in 4-H. She is Pat Currie. When asked her reaction to being elected to her new position, Pat exclaimed "Wow!"

CHS has chosen its leaders. We wish them a good year and lots of luck.

Senior DE Student Rates First In State As Winner

By LYN JACOBS

The Senior Class of CHS has added another to its list of "firsts."

At the 28th Annual State Leadership Conference Awards Banquet of DECA, held in Columbus last Friday and Saturday, Debbie Dumm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dumm, 1033 Mulberry Road, became the first girl in Ohio to be the recipient of the first place trophy for radio advertising.

Debbie, employed as secretary for Elsea, Inc., first competed in contests within District 17 and by placing first became eligible to enter this state competition. She was the victor over the 50 studens who competed in the field of radio advertising from the total of 1,100 DECA students vying for state titles.

As a result of this honor Debbie will attend the national leadership conference in Los Angeles, Calif. in May, being a voting delegate for the state of Ohio.

Receiving an honorable mention in the same field was Tom Tatman, a junior at CHS. The two CHS chapters were also awarded honorable mentions for outstanding DECA chapters in 1972.

Others attending the conference last weekend, where Debbie was the only person from District 17 to be honored at the banquet, were Martha Moore, chapter of the year II; Patty Ogan, chapter of the year I; Shirley Moody, current marketing; Dale Davis, income tax; Herb Poling, investments; Tracy Ferguson, free enterprise; Mary Alice Greenwood and Bill Rosengarten, advisers.

ACHIEVEMENT — Debbie Dumm, seated with trophy, became the first Ohio girl to receive the first place trophy for radio advertising in the DECA state contest. With Debbie are other Circleville DECA students Shirley Moody, Patty Ogan, Becky McCoy, adviser Mary Alice Greenwood, Dale Davis, Tom Tatman, Herb Poling, Martha Moore, Tracy Ferguson and adviser Bill Rosengarten.

DE Student Of The Week

TRACY FERGUSON

By LYN JACOBS

Recognized by the Red and Black staff this week is DECA student Tracy Ferguson who lives with Rev. and Mrs. Melvin Maxwell at 501 E. Ohio St.

Employed by Sears, Roebuck and Co., Tracy works as telephone sales girl, answering the telephone, taking messages, and doing sales promotion for special items. She works from 12-30 hours a week depending on sales volume and has found the job helpful in meeting people and learning how to talk to them. She feels she has also learned a great deal about the value of different merchandise.

Tracy obtained her job after learning about the vacancy from one of the DE coordinators, then following this up by going for an interview and taking tests for the job.

Besides enabling her to have this job, Tracy has found that DECA has helped her by teaching proper grooming, appropriate business dress, store loyalty and the results of being honest.

After graduation, Tracy plans to be married and later study journalism. DECA has helped her to decide that she would also like to own and operate a bookstore.

Abusing The Vote

AN EDITORIAL
By Mike Chelikowsky

The American people have the unique privilege of voting. They can vote for or against a bill, pick the best candidate, but the latter of the powers of vote is too often abused.

Voting is how Americans as citizens can change things in the United States. It is our privilege and right to get our ideas across. Americans pick their representatives and get bills through. Voting is how America is changed.

Stay-at-home voters have no excuse for not putting their X on a ballot. Citizens complain about the way one official runs things; voting is how things are changed. Get out and vote for whom you think would do the best job.

Voting is extended to all aspects of our democratic oriented life, especially in schools. Many times school elections turn into popularity contests. In my opinion, this is the worst abuse of the voting privilege. The most populuar person in school does not deserve a class or Student Council office just because he is well-known or well-liked.

The person best qualified and most interested should be the person to win. The most popular person may also be the best qualified, but still the vote should go to the best qualified.

Even in schools the percentage of non-voters is too high. Twenty percent of the juniors and sophomores did not express themselves in the recent Student Council elections. Some were absent, but most just did not care or were scared.

Another bad habit acquired by the student body is the voting of only certain offices. A voter enters the voting booth and only votes for one office. In recent elections each executive office of Student Council lacked the total of 361 votes (president, 356; vice-presidnt, 351; treasurer, 350; secretary, 351). This cuts down on the other candidates possible votes. Only voting for one or two offices causes the other offices to be short votes which could mean the difference in an election.

In my mind, I see students not voting for the best possible candidates but running a popularity contest. Where do these ideas of not voting and not knowing the candidates come from. Home?

Eeveryone has the chance to vote; know your candidates and issues; pick the best. It's your country and school, and we can change it. Or is it always going to be true that "good guys finish last?"

Coach Treats Football Team

By CRAIG ALLISON

Last November some forty football players hung up their football cleats and helmets, and put away their pants and jerseys, and everybody thought football season was over.

And it was, in one sense. But part of every football season are the banquets. Three days after the season ended, the boys who were selected to the All-SCOL football team were treated to a dinner at Washington Senior High School in Washington Court House.

A week later the Kiwanis Club of Circleville entertained the football letterman at the Mecca Restaurant. Two days after that, the Booster Club of Circleville High School entertained the fall sports teams and cheerleaders at the high school.

One would think that after this the football team would not want to look at food. But being red-blooded boys, they willfully attended a banquet at David's Buffet in Columbus. This group was made up of those boys who missed no more than six work-outs during the summer. Being buffet style, the boys ate until they were quite satisfied. They ate everything from frog legs to roast beef and from jello-salad to tossed salad.

A special note of thanks is in order. The boys, coaches and their wives were given this magnificent banquet by Coach Williams, who paid for everything out of his own pocket.

Circleville's baseball stars of the Junior Class are Merv Taylor, Ozie England, Scoop Hoskins, Mitch Mogan, and Gates Truex.

Seniors have thirty-four days of school left.

Did everyone figure out how to work the voting machines?

SET STAGE — Kirk Brown, Bill Spain, Tom Shea, Teresa Stevens work with set chairman Paul Cupp in readying the set for "Imaginary Invalid" to be presented in April as the Senior Class production.

Crew Works To Prepare Play Set

By KAREN LITTEN

Actively working on the set for the production of "The Imaginary Invalid," the Senior class play, is the set crew, under Chairman Paul Cupp.

The set itself will be raked to give both a physical and psychological closeness to the audience.

A permanent entrance and exit will be on either side of the set, and will enable the actors to have what would appear to be a grand entrance or a grand exit whenever they enter or leave the stage. Therefore, no matter how short the time is that an individual actor is on the stage, he is given a formal approach in full view of the audience.

This is known universally as the French scene. It presents a change in the tone of the play each time an actor leaves or enters the stage. This term is derved from Moliere's style.

The set crew will be working on the decorative and very symmetrical baroque background, trying carefully to make it as perfect as Moliere himself would have had it.

Rabbit Liberation Takes Over Hotel

A dozen bunnies were released from a holiday display in the hotel Wednesday and hopped merrily through the halls while employes scoured the building rounding them up.

A note by their cage, apparently from the person who freed them, read: "Rabbit Liberation of America." It was signed "Bugs Bunny."

Dear Abby: By Abigail Van Buren

Wife's Civility Strained

DEAR ABBY: Here's the picture: My husband employs a salesman I'll call "Ben." After 25 years of marriage, Ben walked out on his wife and family for a tramp half his age. There was a lot of gossip about it so my husband transferred Ben to another city.

My husband sometimes calls this out-of-town salesmen in for meetings, and naturally Ben comes and brings this tramp with him.

I admit I identify with the wronged wife and I can't stand the sight of Ben's girl friend. My husband entertains his business associates for cocktails in our home, so Ben and his girl friend are included. Abby, it eats my innards out to even speak to her, and I don't have much use for Ben either.

My husband says their private lives have nothing to do with him— that Ben is a great salesman and he is not going to insult him.

My question: Should I be expected to associate with people like Ben and that cheap little home-wrecker?

IRATE WIFE

DEAR WIFE: It's your husband's home, too, and if he wants to entertain his business associates, you should cooperate. You don't have to "socialize" with Ben and his friend. Just be civil.

DEAR ABBY: Is the generation gap between my husband and me and my parents showing or not?

Now that our daughter is ten and our son is seven, my parents have ceased overnight visits to our home. They used to sleep in our daughter's room, which we would put our daughter in the upper bunk in her brother's room.

Now that the children are older, my parents say they are afraid of what "could happen" between them. "Children are little animals and wouldn't know what they were doing," they say.

What are your thoughts about the right age to separate (if at all) brothers and sisters?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I would hope that children who are old enough to be curious about the opposite sex, (and yours are) would have asked their parents questions and received satisfying answers. All children do a certain amount of exploring and experimenting when they get the chance. I would not bed them down together past the age of five.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old married, college -educated woman with a terrific problem. I am literally terrified of going to a doctor. I don't mean just frightened. I mean petrified.

I know this is childish, but I can't seem to help myself. All my family does is yell and scream at me, which only makes matters worse. I have thought of seeking professional help but we can't afford it right now as my husband is still in school.

How can I rid myself of this terrible fear?

TERRIFIED IN BUFFALO

DEAR TERRIFIED: Surely in Buffalo, New York, there is a Mental Health Clinic where one is billed accordingly to what he can afford to pay. Inquire.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HELPLESS IN COVINA: Don't tell the father anything. You could be mistaken about the conclusions you drew concerning his daughter and son's relationship. In any case, they are living in another country, far from home, are both "of age", so the father couldn't do anything about it anyway.

Pumping Out Of Barge Readied

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Louisville Mayor Frank W. Burke has ordered 4,000 persons evacuated by noon Saturday when an attempt is expected to be made to dislodge a chlorine-laden barge from the McAlpine Dam here on the Ohio River.

The evacuation area encompasses homes within a mile of the dam, including part of the downtown Louisville business district. Residents are being asked to leave in case the chlorine leaks out and turns into a toxic gas upon striking the air.

The evacuation outlined Thursday night by the mayor is to last at least 24 hours—until noon Sunday.

Despite evacuation plans, officials stressed again the danger of leak is minimal

If weather conditions permit, the critical phase of he operation will be attempted Saturday.

The runaway barge, containing more than 600 tons of liquid chlorine has been lodged in a dam gate at a point where the water rushes over the dam.

The barge broke loose from a tow March 19. Since then, chemical experts and federal and state officials have been considering different plans for the removal of the chlorine.

College Sets Guaranteed Tuition

MOUNT CARROLL, Ill. (AP) — Shimer College, which 20 years ago pioneered the concept of admitting students before they had finished high school, now is taking a new path toward helping parents keep their children in college.

The board of directors of the little 120-year-old coed school 130 miles west of Chicago has approved a plan to freeze tuition for incoming freshmen for the student's four years.

Shimer President Robert S. Long says the freeze will enable parents and students to budget for college the way they do for other major expendiures.

"There's no reason in the world why larger schools couldn't adopt the same kind of program," says Asst. President Ralph C. Hough. "We tell the student that, "if you come her to school, here's what you have to pay for at least long enough to get your bachelor's degree.'

"In terms of what this nation is trying to do to stop inflation, his seems like a very natural move," Hough said. "Let's face it, there's as much money being sunk into education as there is into anything else."

The next Shimer freshman class will be guaranteed a tuition of $2,300 a year for the next four years. Each subsequent freshman class will have the same four-year guarantee, though the cost may be different.

Hough said the new program takes into account forecast increases in size, regular faculty pay increments and other costs which drive operation costs upward.

Hough said the four-year liberal arts school has a long tradition of cutting corners and saving money, dating to its founding in 1853. Frances Wood Shimer came to Mount Carroll in that year from Milton, N.Y., for health reasons and opened a seminary for women.

"She had little money to work with," Hough said, "so she did a lot of the masonry and carpentry work herself, drew plans when she couldn t afford an architect and even canned vegetables and fruits in the summer herself for use in the school cafeteria the following fall."

Twenty years ago, Shimer was one of 11 schools throughout the nation that began experiments with an early-entrant program under a grant from the Ford Foundaion. For one reason or another, Hough says the others abandoned the plan.

But Shimer has been successful and now has 30 per cent of its 500 students operating under a program where they enter college work after their sophomore or junior year in high school.

SET STAGE — Kirk Brown, Bill Spain, Tom Shea, Teresa Stevens work with set chairman Paul Cupp in readying the set for "Imaginary Invalid" to be presented in April as the Senior Class production.

Crew Works To Prepare Play Set

By KAREN LITTEN

Actively working on the set for the production of "The Imaginary Invalid," the Senior class play, is the set crew, under Chairman Paul Cupp.

The set itself will be raked to give both a physical and psychological closeness to the audience.

A permanent entrance and exit will be on either side of the set, and will enable the actors to have what would appear to be a grand entrance or a grand exit whenever they enter or leave the stage. Therefore, no matter how short the time is that an individual actor is on the stage, he is given a formal approach in full view of the audience.

This is known universially as the French scene. It presents a change in the tone of the play each time an actor leaves or enters the stage. This term is derved from Moliere's style.

The set crew will be working on the decorative and very symmetrical baroque background, trying carefully to make it as perfect as Moliere himself would have had it.

Rabbit Liberation Takes Over Hotel

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Rabbit liberation" took over a downtown hotel and started a new kind of Easter hunt.

A dozen bunnies were released from a holiday display in the hotel Wednesday and hopped merrily through the halls while employes scoured the building rounding them up.

A note by their cage, apparently from the person who freed them, read: "Rabbit Liberation of America." It was signed "Bugs Bunny."

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

Wife's Civility Strained

DEAR ABBY: Here's the picture: My husband employs a salesman I'll call "Ben." After 25 years of marriage, Ben walked out on his wife and family for a tramp half his age. There was a lot of gossip about it so my husband transferred Ben to another city.

My husband sometimes calls this out-of-town salesmen in for meetings, and naturally Ben comes and brings this tramp with him.

I admit I identify with the wronged wife and I can't stand the sight of Ben's girl friend. My husband entertains his business associates for cocktails in our home, so Ben and his girl friend are included. Abby, it eats my innards out to even speak to her, and I don't have much use for Ben either.

My husband says their private lives have nothing to do with him— that Ben is a great salesman and he is not going to insult him.

My question: Should I be expected to associate with people like Ben and that cheap little home-wrecker?

IRATE WIFE

DEAR WIFE: It's your husband's home, too, and if he wants to entertain his business associates, you should cooperate. You don't have to "socialize" with Ben and his friend. Just be civil.

DEAR ABBY: Is the generation gap between my husband and me and my parents showing or not?

Now that our daughter is ten and our son is seven, my parents have ceased overnight visits to our home. They used to sleep in our daughter's room, which we would put our daughter in the upper bunk in her brother's room.

Now that the children are older, my parents say they are afraid of what "could happen" between them. "Children are little animals and wouldn't know what they were doing," they say.

What are your thoughts about the right age to separate (if at all) brothers and sisters?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I would hope that children who are old enough to be curious about the opposite sex, (and yours are) would have asked their parents questions and received satisfying answers. All children do a certain amount of exploring and experimenting when they get the chance. I would not bed them down together past the age of five.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old married, college -educated woman with a terrific problem. I am literally terrified of going to a doctor. I don't mean just frightened. I mean petrified.

I know this is childish, but I can't seem to help myself. All my family does is yell and scream at me, which only makes matters worse. I have thought of seeking professional help but we can't afford it right now as my husband is still in school.

How can I rid myself of this terrible fear?

TERRIFIED IN BUFFALO

DEAR TERRIFIED: Surely in Buffalo, New York, there is a Mental Health Clinic where one is billed accordingly to what he can afford to pay. Inquire.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HELPLESS IN COVINA: Don't tell the father anything. You could be mistaken about the conclusions you drew concerning his daughter and son's relationship. In any case, they are living in another country, far from home, are both "of age", so the father couldn't do anything about it anyway.

Pumping Out Of Barge Readied

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Louisville Mayor Frank W. Burke has ordered 4,000 persons evacuated by noon Saturday when an attempt is expected to be made to dislodge a chlorine-laden barge from the McAlpine Dam here on the Ohio River.

The evacuation area encompasses homes within a mile of the dam, including part of the downtown Louisville business district. Residents are being asked to leave in case the chlorine leaks out and turns into a toxic gas upon striking the air.

The evacuation outlined Thursday night by the mayor is to last at least 24 hours—until noon Sunday.

Despite evacuation plans, officials stressed again the danger of leak is minimal

If weather conditions permit, the critical phase of he operation will be attempted Saturday.

The runaway barge, containing more than 600 tons of liquid chlorine has been lodged in a dam gate at a point where the water rushes over the dam.

The barge broke loose from a tow March 19. Since then, chemical experts and federal and state officials have been considering different plans for the removal of the chlorine.

College Sets Guaranteed Tuition

MOUNT CARROLL, Ill. (AP) — Shimer College, which 20 years ago pioneered the concept of admitting students before they had finished high school, now is taking a new path toward helping parents keep their children in college.

The board of directors of the little 120-year-old coed school 130 miles west of Chicago has approved a plan to freeze tuition for incoming freshmen for the student's four years.

Shimer President Robert S. Long says the freeze will enable parents and students to budget for college the way they do for other major expendiures.

"There's no reason in the world why larger schools couldn't adopt the same kind of program," says Asst. President Ralph C. Hough. "We tell the student that, "if you come her to school, here's what you have to pay for at least long enough to get your bachelor's degree.'

"In terms of what this nation is trying to do to stop inflation, his seems like a very natural move," Hough said. "Let's face it, there's as much money being sunk into education as there is into anything else."

The next Shimer freshman class will be guaranteed a tuition of $2,300 a year for the next four years. Each subsequent freshman class will have the same four-year guarantee, though the cost may be different.

Hough said the new program takes into account forecast increases in size, regular faculty pay increments and other costs which drive operation costs upward.

Hough said the four-year liberal arts school has a long tradition of cutting corners and saving money, dating to its founding in 1853. Frances Wood Shimer came to Mount Carroll in that year from Milton, N.Y., for health reasons and opened a seminary for women.

"She had little money to work with," Hough said, "so she did a lot of the masonry and carpentry work herself, drew plans when she couldn t afford an architect and even canned vegetables and fruits in the summer herself for use in the school cafeteria the following fall."

Twenty years ago, Shimer was one of 11 schools throughout the nation that began experiments with an early-entrant program under a grant from the Ford Foundaion. For one reason or another, Hough says the others abandoned the plan.

But Shimer has been successful and now has 30 per cent of its 500 students operating under a program where they enter college work after their sophomore or junior year in high school.

Man And Nature Move Toward Some Completion

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the final article of a five-part Easter series about the Hope of Heaven.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

An "inordinate vanity," Voltaire called it. The "great lie,'' said Nietzsche. An "illusion," Freud claimed. An "opiate," said Karl Marx. These are among the barbs that have been hurled at the human hope of heaven. But to believers, it not only makes sense, but is the only sound rationale for existence itself.

Either creation has an ultimate purpose, a definite reason for being, or else it has none. And to affirm life fully demands affirming that it has a full objective.

"The only live alternative to this is that the world has no real meaning at all." observes Quaker philosopher Elton Trueblood.

Obviously, by the very flux in reality itself, it is headed somewhere. It always points beyond its immediacy. Both men and nature give evidence of being intrinsically unfinished business. They're moving, continually developing, working toward some completion.

"We know that the whole creation has been groaning in travail together until now," the aspostle Paul wrote long before science discovered the constant fluidity of the universe. "And not only the creation, but we ourselves."

These processive intimations, however, are not the main grounds for the classic Christian hope. It rests rather on the gracious element in the bestowal of existence itself, its gift-like quality, its implicitly loving basis, vivified by the promise put into it by Chrst's resurrecton from death.

"By His great mercy we have been born anew to a living hope," the apostle Peter wrote, an "entrance into the eternal kindgom of our Lord."

This high expectancy, at its core, is based on a conviction that the universal power source and dynamism in life is love, the heart of God, and that this love wants utmost fulfillment for its beloved, for human beings.

"To love a being is to say, 'thou shalt not die,' " notes Catholic philosopher Gabriel Marcel. This is a built-in concomitant of love, and if love truly is inherent to life, then the intent is to enhance it.

"Behold, I make all things new," the Book of Revelation expresses the divine promise to men. "And God Himself will be with them; He will wipe away every tear from their eyes, and death shall be no more."

However, in the modern technocratic world, the vision often is derided as a "heaven symdrome,'' reflecting egocentric self-interest, or "cabin-in-the-sky," escapsim that inclines people to twiddle their thumbs while waiting for it.

In motivationally traceable fact, however, it is from the concept of "the eternal and the unlimited that the progress of the human race has sprung," says British historian Christopher Dawson.

It is true that in past centuries, a one-sided concentration on the afterlife seemed to discount efforts to improve this world. But the modern counter-balancing church stress on the priority of the present has tended to blank out the trans-historical dimension, thus shrinking men's horizons and their hopefulness, and to an extent, devaluing their ultimate worth as persons.

"Now some of us are beginning to recognize that without an ultimate destiny, man's life in the here and now is depreciated even more than was the case when ultimate destiny was contrasted with his life," says theologian John M. Cobb. "This life and final destiny belong together."

Although many people have assumed that "modernity precluded any such hope," he said that actually, "personal life after death makes more sense than is usually realized." And increasing knowledge of reality has strengthened rather than weakened the case for it.

But aside from the accumulating latter-day clues, the very hallmark of man is his impulse to transcendence, the characteristic that distinguishes him. His personality always surpasses its own self-expression. His actuality never quite matches his potentiality. He senses inwardly he is more than himself. It is 'a dimension of ultimacy or of the unconditional," says Presbyterian theologian Langdon Gilkey.

The "earnest expectation of the creature," Scripture puts it.

In his self-consciousness, man looks on himself as in a mirror, no longer merely knowing but knowing he knows, an object of his own reflection. He is so sensitized that he is puzzled by his own existence, wondering at why he is speculating. questioning, projecting beyond himself. In a sense, his development in the creative process, in contrast to the rest of reality, already has brought the birth of a "new world," giving intrinsic evidence of such further possibility.

"Here the mystery is the mystery of known fact," says Trueblood.

However, Dean Krister Stendahl of Harvard's Divinity School says the idea of personal immortality often appears "to little, too selfish, too preoccupied with self," and that people today are "less and less concerned about it." It "may be on the way out," he adds.

"The question is whether God's justice will win out. Will God ultimately come through? Will the kingdom come in which righteousness flows forth and justice is in the midst of us all? . . . The fighting arrogance of man, even heightened into projecting his importance into immortality, should perhaps be checked." It "has a tendency to claim to know more than may be good for us."

Indeed, it can involve brash assumptions, and often has, including overblown, detailed previews of heaven's fun and furnishings, its architecture, count of the occupants and date of its arrival, thus trivializing Biblical thought and what basically must remain mystery.

"No eye has seen, nor ear heard, nor the heart of man conceived. what God has prepared for those who love Him," Paul writes. Whatever its features, they apparently will be enormously surprising. "No doubt it will be utterly different than anything we have ever imagined,'' says Scottish theologian John Baillie.

However, the surpassing outcome explicitly includes people, individual persons, of all history. While this can be distorted into overweening self-regard, the ultimate good cannot be realized just in some abstract sense, but necessarily must be for persons, for righting wrongs done them, for filling out their fragmented lives. There is no such thing as goodness apart from individual beings, from specific selves.

"Their good and the good are indissolubly interfused and this must include ourselves." says Anglican theologian John Austin Baker. "To be zealous for the universal triumph of good but not for its triumph in myself is nonsensical, a contradiction. It is not more moral, but less."

As Jesus put it, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." And the ultimaterealization of it cannot be in some detached principle, but directly in persons, including self. A personal sense of life's worth is the very basis of regard for others and of willingness to suffer for them.

While it sometimes is assumed that justice, by itself, is a pure, noble objective, this is a thin view of it. The aim is never only for justice's sake, but for love's sake, for the sake of people, personally, individually.

To eliminate personalities from the final consummation would "defeat the very meaning" of their inclusion in the process at all, says Episcopal theologian John Macquarrie. "If everything is to return to an undifferentiated unity, then creation itself would have been pointless in the first place, and all the risk of freedom in creation, its suffering and striving. would have been sheer waste."

And it definitely would not be set aright for its main participants, for the oppressed, excluded, starved and slain human beings. It makes sense only if it moves toward their justification and full potentialities, an order in which their varying personal identities are maintained freely and responsibly complementing each other in a richer, yet diversified, harmonious unity.

"In such a future all that matters about our selfhood is preserved, but is developed, transformed and purified, passing from the compartmentalized psyche that we know now into myriads of free open selves," says theologian Cobb. Each would totally know and be totally open to all. and each would enjoy "an inconceivable richness of values and meanings."

The "commonwealth in heaven," Scripture calls it.

Without that preservation of inter-acting variety, a mark of every advanced mode of being, it would mean a return to some monolithic, undifferentiated state, like primordial energy, without the sensitive, complex web of inter-relationships that distinguish its highest life form.

Actually, at every level of nature, the more any individual entity is "united in a whole, the more it attains differentiating self-sufficiency," says Catholic philosopher Eulalio R. Balthazar. "The more 'other' they become in conjunction. the more they find themselves as 'self'."

Strictly speaking, however, Biblical faith does not assert human "immortality," but rather that man is mortal, that he dies. The "immortality of the soul" phrase is from Greek philosophy, which sees man as double-natured, his body insignificant and the soul leaving it at death for the Elysian fields.

"There is no phrase in Scripture about the 'immortal soul' or the 'immortality of the soul,' " notes Catholic scholar Joseph E. Kokjohn.

Rather, Scripture sees man as a psychosomatic whole, body and spirit, his life in eternity given entirely by God through resurrection from death. While Judaism does not specify conclusions about it. it is foreseen by Old Testament prophets, Isaiah and Daniel.

Christ both promised and foretokened it in history, as involving the entire personality, body and spirit. Its pattern necessarily would be preserved after death until the resurrection is effected. How this happens is utterly unknown, but advanced physics now recognizes that all reality participates both in mentality and materiality without in fact being either.

In any event, the resurrection means transformation, as it did in Christ, who afterward passes through locked doors, appears and disappears. It also implies total renovation, such as a hunchback no longer being a hunchback but completely renewed.

"How are the dead raised?" the skeptics asked Paul, who replied. "You foolish man! What you sow does not come to life unless it dies. And what you sow is not the body which is to be, but a bare kernel." An acorn does not become another acorn, but an oak tree.

"God gives it a body as he has chosen, and to each kind of seed its own body . . . What is sown is imperishable, what is raised is imperishable. It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness, it is raised in power . . . We shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the trumpet will sound, and the dead will be raised imperishable. and we shall be changed."

The transformation also has cosmic dimensions, involving not just man but the whole course of existence, the earth and its spatio-temporal environment, a rolling up of all history. Paul says God's reconciling purpose was "set forth in Christ, as a plan for the fullnes sof time to unite all things in Him, things in heaven and things on earth."

This "fullness of time" does not indicate flat, boring timelessness, but a recapitulation of everything in time, the past, present and future of every part and person of it, a maturing of it so that it possesses its fullest activity, capacities and unhampered further creativity.

At present, time is highly ambiguous, theoretically curved and spacially reversible, yet seeming only successive for human beings. It is a mere quantity when measured mechanically by a clock, but highly qualitative to persons, who experience it as relative to its content, either rich or draggingly barren. It also is cumulative, the present time always loaded with more reality than past time.

In fact, the present is "not fully real," Balthazar points out. Without a future. "it would cease to be." Similarly, man never reaches his "full actuality" in this life. He is a succession of selves, from childhood through manhood, a becoming, never totally identical to his past self.

Neither is he yet free, since ignorance binds and blocks his choices. Yet as he matures, he becomes less and less a creature of the instant, subject to passing circumstances. He becomes a more integrated self, partly transcending successive time, approaching its fullness. Its truth, Jesus said, would make man truly free.

The coming kingdom, Jesus said, is like a tiny "seed" growing toward a great tree filled with birds, like a field developing toward its harvest, like a hidden treasure or "pearl of great price" for which man should invest all his resources.

He likened its realization to a festal gathering, a wedding banquet of righteousness and joy. A "new heaven and a new earth," the Book of Revelation says, with a "new name" and a "new song."

"In my Father's house are many rooms," Jesus said. "If it were not so, would I have told you that I go to prepare a place for you? And when I go and prepare a place for you. I will come again and will take you to myself, that where I am you may be also."

Kidnapers, Captives Die In Blast

NIKSAR, Turkey (AP) — Ten Turkish terrorists and three kidnap victims, one Canadian and two British radar technicians, were killed Thursday when ammunition exploded in the mountain village house where they were surrounded by Turkish troops.

A government official reported the cause of the explosion was not known.

"Everyone in the house was killed," he said.

Shortly before the explosion a Turkish lawyer acquainted with the leftist terrorists was sent into the house in an attempt to persuade them to surrender.

The lawyer was also killed.

The government official said the lawyer planned to tell the terrorists their situation was hopeless, that the government would never compromise, and that they should give up and release the radar technicians unharmed.

Transport Department Bill Rewritten

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A bill creating a state department of transportation has been rewritten by Rep. Gordon Scherer, R-71 Cincinnati, and is expected to be reported out of Highways and Transportation Committee next week.

Scherer has scheduled hearings on the bill Tuesday and Wednesday.

Under the redrafted bill, the Department of Public Safety, including the Highway Patrol, will remain intact and not be put into the new agency.

The Division of Aviation in the Commerce Department would be switched to the new department but the state would have no increased powers in the aviation field.

Man And Nature Move Toward Some Completion

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the final article of a five-part Easter series about the Hope of Heaven.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

An "inordinate vanity," Voltaire called it. The "great lie,'' said Nietzsche. An "illusion," Freud claimed. An "opiate," said Karl Marx. These are among the barbs that have been hurled at the human hope of heaven. But to believers, it not only makes sense, but is the only sound rationale for existence itself.

Either creation has an ultimate purpose, a definite reason for being, or else it has none. And to affirm life fully demands affirming that it has a full objective.

"The only live alternative to this is that the world has no real meaning at all," observes Quaker philosopher Elton Trueblood.

Obviously, by the very flux in reality itself, it is headed somewhere. It always points beyond its immediacy. Both men and nature give evidence of being intrinsically unfinished business. They're moving, continually developing, working toward some completion.

"We know that the whole creation has been groaning in travail together until now," the aspostle Paul wrote long before science discovered the constant fluidity of the universe. "And not only the creation, but we ourselves."

These processive intimations, however, are not the main grounds for the classic Christian hope. It rests rather on the gracious element in the bestowal of existence itself, its gift-like quality, its implicitly loving basis, vivified by the promise put into it by Chrst's resurrecton from death.

"By His great mercy we have been born anew to a living hope," the apostle Peter wrote, an "entrance into the eternal kindgom of our Lord."

This high expectancy, at its core, is based on a conviction that the universal power source and dynamism in life is love, the heart of God, and that this love wants utmost fulfillment for its beloved, for human beings.

"To love a being is to say, 'thou shalt not die,' " notes Catholic philosopher Gabriel Marcel. This is a built-in concomitant of love, and if love truly is inherent to life, then the intent is to enhance it.

"Behold, I make all things new," the Book of Revelation expresses the divine promise to men. "And God Himself will be with them; He will wipe away every tear from their eyes, and death shall be no more."

However, in the modern technocratic world, the vision often is derided as a "heaven symdrome,'' reflecting egocentric self-interest, or "cabin-in-the-sky," escapsim that inclines people to twiddle their thumbs while waiting for it.

In motivationally traceable fact, however, it is from the concept of "the eternal and the unlimited that the progress of the human race has sprung," says British historian Christopher Dawson.

It is true that in past centuries, a one-sided concentration on the afterlife seemed to discount efforts to improve this world. But the modern counterbalancing church stress on the priority of the present has tended to blank out the trans-historical dimension, thus shrinking men's horizons and their hopefulness, and to an extent, devaluing their ultimate worth as persons.

"Now some of us are beginning to recognize that without an ultimate destiny, man's life in the here and now is depreciated even more than was the case when ultimate destiny was contrasted with his life," says theologian John M. Cobb. "This life and final destiny belong together."

Although many people have assumed that "modernity precluded any such hope," he said that actually, "personal life after death makes more sense than is usually realized." And increasing knowledge of reality has strengthened rather than weakened the case for it.

But aside from the accumulating latter-day clues, the very hallmark of man is his impulse to transcendence, the characteristic that distinguishes him. His personality always surpasses its own self-expression. His actuality never quite matches his potentiality. He senses inwardly he is more than himself. It is 'a dimension of ultimacy or of the unconditional," says Presbyterian theologian Langdon Gilkey.

The "earnest expectation of the creature," Scripture puts it.

In his self-consciousness, man looks on himself as in a mirror, no longer merely knowing but knowing he knows, an object of his own reflection. He is so sensitized that he is puzzled by his own existence, wondering at why he is speculating, questioning, projecting beyond himself. In a sense, his development in the creative process, in contrast to the rest of reality, already has brought the birth of a "new world," giving intrinsic evidence of such further possibility.

"Here the mystery is the mystery of known fact," says Trueblood.

However, Dean Krister Stendahl of Harvard's Divinity School says the idea of personal immortality often appears "to little, too selfish, too preoccupied with self," and that people today are "less and less concerned about it." It "may be on the way out," he adds.

"The question is whether God's justice will win out. Will God ultimately come through? Will the kingdom come in which righteousness flows forth and justice is in the midst of us all? . . . The fighting arrogance of man, even heightened into projecting his importance into immortality, should perhaps be checked." It "has a tendency to claim to know more than may be good for us."

Indeed, it can involve brash assumptions, and often has, including overblown, detailed previews of heaven's fun and furnishings, its architecture, count of the occupants and date of its arrival, thus trivializing Biblical thought and what basically must remain mystery.

"No eye has seen, nor ear heard, nor the heart of man conceived. what God has prepared for those who love Him," Paul writes. Whatever its features, they apparently will be enormously surprising. "No doubt it will be utterly different than anything we have ever imagined,'' says Scottish theologian John Baillie.

However, the surpassing outcome explicitly includes people, individual persons, of all history. While this can be distorted into overweening self-regard, the ultimate good cannot be realized just in some abstract sense, but necessarily must be for persons, for righting wrongs done them, for filling out their fragmented lives. There is no such thing as goodness apart from individual beings, from specific selves.

"Their good and the good are indissolubly interfused and this must include ourselves." says Anglican theologian John Austin Baker. "To be zealous for the universal triumph of good but not for its triumph in myself is nonsensical, a contradiction. It is not more moral, but less."

As Jesus put it, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." And the ultimaterealization of it cannot be in some detached principle, but directly in persons, including self. A personal sense of life's worth is the very basis of regard for others and of willingness to suffer for them.

While it sometimes is assumed that justice, by itself, is a pure, noble objective, this is a thin view of it. The aim is never only for justice's sake, but for love's sake, for the sake of people, personally, individually.

To eliminate personalities from the final consummation would "defeat the very meaning" of their inclusion in the process at all, says Episcopal theologian John Macquarrie. "If everything is to return to an undifferentiated unity, then creation itself would have been pointless in the first place, and all the risk of freedom in creation, its suffering and striving. would have been sheer waste."

And it definitely would not be set aright for its main participants, for the oppressed, excluded, starved and slain human beings. It makes sense only if it moves toward their justification and full potentialities, an order in which their varying personal identities are maintained freely and responsibly complementing each other in a richer, yet diversified, harmonious unity.

"In such a future all that matters about our selfhood is preserved, but is developed, transformed and purified, passing from the compartmentalized psyche that we know now into myriads of free open selves," says theologian Cobb. Each would totally know and be totally open to all. and each would enjoy "an inconceivable richness of values and meanings."

The "commonwealth in heaven," Scripture calls it.

Without that preservation of inter-acting variety, a mark of every advanced mode of being, it would mean a return to some monolithic, undifferentiated state, like primordial energy, without the sensitive, complex web of inter-relationships that distinguish its highest life form.

Actually, at every level of nature, the more any individual entity is "united in a whole, the more it attains differentiating self-sufficiency," says Catholic philosopher Eulalio R. Balthazar. "The more 'other' they become in conjunction. the more they find themselves as 'self'."

Strictly speaking, however, Biblical faith does not assert human "immortality," but rather that man is mortal, that he dies. The "immortality of the soul" phrase is from Greek philosophy, which sees man as double-natured, his body insignificant and the soul leaving it at death for the Elysian fields.

"There is no phrase in Scripture about the 'immortal soul' or the 'immortality of the soul,' " notes Catholic scholar Joseph E. Kokjohn.

Rather, Scripture sees man as a psychosomatic whole, body and spirit, his life in eternity given entirely by God through resurrection from death. While Judaism does not specify conclusions about it. it is foreseen by Old Testament prophets, Isaiah and Daniel.

Christ both promised and foretokened it in history, as involving the entire personality, body and spirit. Its pattern necessarily would be preserved after death until the resurrection is effected. How this happens is utterly unknown, but advanced physics now recognizes that all reality participates both in mentality and materiality without in fact being either.

In any event, the resurrection means transformation, as it did in Christ, who afterward passes through locked doors, appears and disappears. It also implies total renovation, such as a hunchback no longer being a hunchback but completely renewed.

"How are the dead raised?" the skeptics asked Paul, who replied. "You foolish man! What you sow does not come to life unless it dies. And what you sow is not the body which is to be, but a bare kernel." An acorn does not become another acorn, but an oak tree.

"God gives it a body as he has chosen, and to each kind of seed its own body . . . What is sown is imperishable, what is raised is imperishable. It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness, it is raised in power . . . We shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the trumpet will sound, and the dead will be raised imperishable. and we shall be changed."

The transformation also has cosmic dimensions, involving not just man but the whole course of existence, the earth and its spatio-temporal environment, a rolling up of all history. Paul says God's reconciling purpose was "set forth in Christ, as a plan for the fullnes sof time to unite all things in Him, things in heaven and things on earth."

This "fullness of time" does not indicate flat, boring timelessness, but a recapitulation of everything in time, the past, present and future of every part and person of it, a maturing of it so that it possesses its fullest activity, capacities and unhampered further creativity.

At present, time is highly ambiguous, theoretically curved and spacially reversible, yet seeming only successive for human beings. It is a mere quantity when measured mechanically by a clock, but highly qualitative to persons, who experience it as relative to its content, either rich or draggingly barren. It also is cumulative, the present time always loaded with more reality than past time.

In fact, the present is "not fully real," Balthazar points out. Without a future. "it would cease to be." Similarly, man never reaches his "full actuality" in this life. He is a succession of selves, from childhood through manhood, a becoming, never totally identical to his past self.

Neither is he yet free, since ignorance binds and blocks his choices. Yet as he matures, he becomes less and less a creature of the instant, subject to passing circumstances. He becomes a more integrated self, partly transcending successive time, approaching its fullness. Its truth, Jesus said, would make man truly free.

The coming kingdom, Jesus said, is like a tiny "seed" growing toward a great tree filled with birds, like a field developing toward its harvest, like a hidden treasure or "pearl of great price" for which man should invest all his resources.

He likened its realization to a festal gathering, a wedding banquet of righteousness and joy. A "new heaven and a new earth," the Book of Revelation says, with a "new name" and a "new song."

"In my Father's house are many rooms," Jesus said. "If it were not so, would I have told you that I go to prepare a place for you? And when I go and prepare a place for you. I will come again and will take you to myself, that where I am you may be also."

Kidnapers, Captives Die In Blast

NIKSAR, Turkey (AP) — Ten Turkish terrorists and three kidnap victims, one Canadian and two British radar technicians, were killed Thursday when ammunition exploded in the mountain village house where they were surrounded by Turkish troops.

A government official reported the cause of the explosion was not known.

"Everyone in the house was killed," he said.

Shortly before the explosion a Turkish lawyer acquainted with the leftist terrorists was sent into the house in an attempt to persuade them to surrender.

The lawyer was also killed.

The government official said the lawyer planned to tell the terrorists their situation was hopeless, that the government would never compromise, and that they should give up and release the radar technicians unharmed.

Transport Department Bill Rewritten

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A bill creating a state department of transportation has been rewritten by Rep. Gordon Scherer, R-71 Cincinnati, and is expected to be reported out of Highways and Transportation Committee next week.

Scherer has scheduled hearings on the bill Tuesday and Wednesday.

Under the redrafted bill, the Department of Public Safety, including the Highway Patrol, will remain intact and not be put into the new agency.

The Division of Aviation in the Commerce Department would be switched to the new department but the state would have no increased powers in the aviation field.

The department's planning functions would be directed at transportation systems generally and not specific projects as Gov. John J. Gilligan wanted. The department would not be able to veto local planning projects.

Despite the changes, Gilligan is expected to give the bill his support.

Willie's Dillies

By BILL McGAFFNEY
Herald Sports Editor

Despite the fact that the weatherman is doing his best to deny it, the major league baseball teams will open the 1972 season next week.

Keeping up with our stout-hearted policy of going out on the limb in matters of this sort, we once again offer our opinion of how things will look in both leagues come October.

In the National League East we have to stay with the Pirates who don't seem to be any weaker than they were last year when they took the whole ball of wax.

The Dodgers, who made a strong run for the National League West last year, picked up Frank Robinson in the off season and the title to boot.

In regard to the Reds' chances we feel they traded away too much power to gain some additional speed.

Baltimore's Orioles should be repeaters in the American League East despite the loss of Frank Robnison. We feel Merv Rettenmund will step into the breach and take up the slack.

Despite all the talk, Vida Blue isn't going to trade his glove and fastball for a pipe wrench which makes the Oakland Athletics number one in the American League West.

This is the way we see it and before the brickbats start flying — Remember we called them right last year.

Passes will be available after Aug. 1 from the office of the high school principal.

Wertman Hurls Logan Elm To 7-1 Decision Over TVHS

Senior pitcher Gary Wertman went all the way on the mound Thursday, hurling Logan Elm to a 7-1 win over visiting Teays Valley.

It was the second win of the season for the Braves' baseball team while the game was the opener for the Vikings.

Wertman gave up one walk, three hits and fanned eight batters. LE Coach Vic Pontius had not intended to use any of his pitchers for a full game this early in the season. But he reported that Wertman was doing a good job and his arm wasn't bothering him so he let him finish the game.

Sam Wilson started for Teays Valley and pitched the first four innings. Jerry Sabine finished the game. Between them they struck out three, walked two and gave up six hits.

* * *

THE lone run for Teays Valley came in the top of the first when Phil Salyers hit a hard double down the left field line and then advanced to third and scored on two passed balls. That was the only threat. In the second Lloyd McManus led off with a single but Wertman retired the next three men on strikeouts.

With two outs in the third inning, Salyers got his second hit, a single to left, but was stranded when the next hitter flyed out.

In the last four innings the only man to reach base was Salyers again. He was walked in the sixth.

For Logan Elm, Mike Holbrook, the first man up, singled to left center, moved up on a walk to Mark Justus and after two outs, both scored on a homer by Wertie Teets over the left field fence.

In the second, the Braves were three up and three down, and in the third Justus doubled but was left stranded.

The fourth run for the Braves came in the fourth inning when Teets doubled to left with one out, advanced on an error and scored on a single by Wertman.

* * *

AGAIN in the fifth the Braves were three up and three down, but in the sixth, exploded for three runs.

Gary Francis started the inning with a walk then with two outs, Doug Marshall doubled over the right fielder's head to drive in Francis. John Mead was safe at first on an error that advanced Marshall to third Mead stole second and both scored on error on a ground ball hit by Wertman.

The next game for Logan Elm is 4 p.m. Monday on the Braves' diamond. Bishop Flaget will provide the competition. Pontius has tabbed Francis for starting pitching role in the game.

J. C. Snead Shares Lead At Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Driving, said J.C. Snead, is the key in the $200,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

"If you get it in the rough and you can't pick it up, you've got mud all over the ball," the drawling, raw-boned nephew of the legendary Sam Snead said Thursday after moving into a share of the first round lead with a 66.

"You hit it with that mud on it, and it's gonna come out of there like a crazy woodpecker. You don't know what it's going to do."

Snead, hero of the successful U.S. Ryder Cup team last year, was tied for the top spot after 18 holes with a pair of veterans, 52-year-old Julius Boros and balding Miller Barber, who matched his five-under-par effort on the cold, wet Sedgefield Country Club course.

The 7,034-yard layout was drenched by a heavy rain Wednesday, which came on the heels of a weekend snow. More rain and possible sleet is forecast Friday.

Because of the wet conditions and the skimpy grass in the fairways officials decided to play so-called winter rules. Players are allowed to lift, clean and pace their ball on the lined fairways and around the greens. They are not allowed to do so in the rough.

By being allowed to get their hands on the ball, the touring pros were able to make a mockery of par. Despite the unpleasant conditions, 66 of the field of 147 matched or broke par.

Stranded Airman Finds Ohio Resident Wasn't Professor

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Air Force S. Sgt. Dave Buller of Salt Lake City, Utah, spoke up quickly when the man ahead of him in the Philadelphia airport ticket line said he'd rented a car to drive to Ohio.

Buller and the man who called himself Hayes both had been bumped off a scheduled flight from Philadelphia to Dayton.

Buller had to reach Wright-Patterson Air Force Base early the next morning to catch a plane to Utah, where he'd see his parents after 2½ years overseas.

Buller begged a ride to Ohio. Hayes said yes.

Arriving in Columbus before daylight, Hayes recruited a friend to drive Buller to Dayton.

"Mr. Hayes is the greatest guy I've ever met," Buller told the new driver, Ohio State University freshman football coach John Mummey.

"Yes," Mummey replied, "Coach Hayes is quite a guy."

"What's this 'coach Hayes,'" Buller asked.

"Didn't you know that was coach Woody Hayes of Ohio State?" Mummey laughed. Buller was dumbfounded. He thought "Mr. Hayes" was a professor of history.

"He kept saying 'fantastic,' and 'I can't believe it,'" Mummey told Columbus Dispatch sports editor Paul Hornung.

"It's the highlight of my life," Buller said. "I'll never forget him. I'm a Buckeye and a Woody Hayes fan for life."

Buller's new friend is the same man who threw a now-legendary tantrum on the field at the University of Michigan last fall as his Buckeyes lost a Big Ten football battle.

"Doggone," said Mummey. "That Woody's a Christian whether he knows it or not."

Cappadona Sues NFL For Job Loss

BOSTON (AP) — Bob Cappadona, a former star fullback at Northeastern University, believes there is a conspiracy in professional football to keep him from playing, and he has filed suit for $300,000 in federal court against 10 National Football League teams.

Cappadona, who graduated from Northeastern in 1966, then played for the then Boston Patriots for two years before being traded to the Buffalo Bills, charged in his suit under the antitrust laws that those two teams and eight others have conspired to keep him from playing pro ball for the last five years.

That meant, the suit claimed. that he has also been barred from participation in the players' pension fund, which is available to players with more than five years in the league.

"It's so involved that I really couldn't begin to tell you," said Cappadona, 30, from his home in Canton. "It's a lot of different things that happened during my career."

He declined to elaborate on the reasons for his legal action, and attorney David Berman, who filed the suit in U.S. District Court, could not be reached for coment.

Named as defendants in the legal action, besides the Boston club, now the New England Patriots, and the Bills, were the Baltimore Colts, Cincinnati Bengals, Kansas City Chiefs, San Francisco 49ers, St. Louis Cardinals, San Diego Chargers, Houston Oilers and the Washington Redskins.

Staubach Confident He's Best

CINCINNATI (AP) — Roger Staubach, quarterback of the Super Bowl Champion Dallas Cowboys doesn't expect rival quarter Craig Morton to take his job away.

"It's like this," Staubach said before a hometown Chamber of Commerce luncheon in his honor, "I'll be going into practice as No. 1. It will be up to him to try to take the job away from me."

Staubach, who won the Heisman Trophy at Annapolis, served four years in the U.S. Navy before entering the National Football League. He is 30 now and said he expects to play "seven or eight more years" before entering the real estate business in Houston as a full-time profession.

Staubach played high school ball at Cincinnati Purcell. Some 350 local well-wishers attended the luncheon Thursday.

"In football, the defense is the best friend of the offense because the defense provides you with good field position," Staubach told the gathering.

Bucks Trim Warriors, 118-93

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"What it comes down to is pride," said Larry Costello, coach of the Milwaukee Bucks.

The Bucks had it Thursday night—but they also had Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

The 7-foot-2 center was the difference as Milwaukee trimmed the Golden State Warriors 118-93 and squared that National Basketball Association Western Conference playoffs at 1-1.

Jabbar scored 25 points and swept 22 rebounds as the Bucks came back to beat the Warriors after an upset loss to the same team two nights earlier.

"We did a lot of things differently than we did on Tuesday night," said Costello, whose team was beaten 117-106 at Milwaukee in the opener of the seven-game series. "We played better defense. Our rebounding was better. And Jabbar was great."

The Los Angeles Lakers took a 2-0 lead in their semifinal series by beating the Chicago Bulls 131-124 in Thursday's only other playoff action.

The NBA playoffs continue tonight with the New York Knicks opening best-of-seven semifinal test with the Baltimore Bullets and the Atlanta Hawks hosting the Boston Celtics. Boston holds a 1-0 edge in that Eastern series.

The American Basketball Association starts its post-season playoffs this afternoon with the Floridians visiting the Virginia Squires in Eastern Division semifinals. New York takes on Kentucky in a night game in the East. Dallas plays at Utah and Denver visits Indiana in the West semifinals.

Along with Jabbar's fine game, the Bucks got a good one out of Curtis Perry, who had 22 points and 9 rebounds. Perry only scored a point in Tuesday night's loss to the Warriors.

"I guess I was a little nervous the other night," said Perry. "But we've beaten the Warriors during the regular season, so there's no reason to get tight right now. It just took a few more shots and they fell in for a change."

Nate Thurmond led Golden State with 32 points, but a big dropoff in production came from Jeff Mullins and Jim Barnett. Mullins and Barnett, who combined for 59 points Tuesday, only had 24 Thursday night.

"Barnett had 30 the other night and only 10 tonight," said Costello. "The reason was that he didn't get the easy baskets the second time. We were getting back and rebounding better. He's a guy you can't let drive, but he's not a great outside shooter."

Barnett said that nervousness caused him to have a bad game.

"I don't like all the publicity of being a hero one night and worrying about not letting my team down the next," said Barnett. "After Tuesday nght's game, I couldn't sleep until 6 a.m. the next morning.

The Bucks took advantage of Barnett's cold shooting to take a 27-17 lead with 3½ minutes left in the first quarter. They outscored the Warriors 12-1 at one stretch.

Milwaukee opened a 43-27 lead early in the second quarter before Golden State made its only real threat, closing to within 51-46. But Lucius Allen and Abdul-Jabbar connected to give the Bucks a 55-47 halftime lead and they opened it to 90-67 after three periods.

Los Angeles rallied in the final four minutes and scored 10 straight points to beat Chicago.

Wilt Chamberlain led the rally, scoring 12 of his 24 points in the final period. The towering Laker center seized 21 rebounds in the game.

Jerry West had 37 points and Gail Goodrich scored 32 to lead Los Angeles' point production. Bob Love led the Chicago offense with 26 points before he left the game with 5:31 left after injuring his ankle.

The Bulls also played the last period without forward Chet Walker, who scored 18 points in the first three periods and then apparently aggravated a leg injury.

Bob Love of the Bulls sprained his left ankle and precautionary X-rays will be taken in Chicago today.

Chicago also operated without its regular center, Tom Boerwinkle, who was sent home for treatment of a knee injury.

Joe Gibbon And Bourbon Help Reds

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Pedro Bourbon and Joe Gibbon virtually assured their positions in the Cincinnati Reds bullpen Thursday, holding the New York Mets scoreless in the last four innings.

The Met pitchers, however, rookies Buzz Capra and Jon Matlack and veteran Tug McGraw, pitched a four hitter with 10 strikeouts to beat the Reds 4-1.

"The Mets threw real good," said Red manager Sparky Anderson, "They deserve to win."

Capra, who was selected by New York 625th in the player draft two years ago, most impressed Anderson. "Being drafted that low and working his way up that good, you know the kid has courage."

Anderson did not mention Reds starter Ross Grimsley who was pounded for 10 hits and four runs, three in the fifth inning. Grimsley won 10 games in his rookie season last year.

"Joe (Gibbon) is throwing better than I've seen him in two years. He was really in shape to play this spring and he's throwing real hard," Anderson said.

Gibbon, 37, caught on in relief with the Reds last year after he was given an unconditional release by the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Of Bourbon, who has a spring earned run average of .047 in 19 innings, Anderson said: "That kid is taking care of himself. He's challenging the hitters and shows what can happen if a kid really wants to do something."

Despite the fact that the weatherman is doing his best to deny it, the major league baseball teams will open the 1972 season next week.

Keeping up with our stout-hearted policy of going out on the limb in matters of this sort, we once again offer our opinion of how things will look in both leagues come October.

In the National League East we have to stay with the Pirates who don't seem to be any weaker than they were last year when they took the whole ball of wax.

The Dodgers, who made a strong run for the National League West last year, picked up Frank Robinson in the off season and the title to boot.

In regard to the Reds' chances we feel they traded away too much power to gain some additional speed.

Baltimore's Orioles should be repeaters in the American League East despite the loss of Frank Robinison. We feel Merv Rettenmund will step into the breach and take up the slack.

Despite all the talk, Vida Blue isn't going to trade his glove and fastball for a pipe wrench which makes the Oakland Athletics number one in the American League West.

This is the way we see it and before the brickbats start flying — Remember we called them right last year.

The Westfall Athletic Board has approved a special program for citizens over 65 of the school district beginning with the 1972 football season.

Upon presentation of evidence to the high school principal that a resident is 65 or over, a pass will be issued which will entitle the bearer to attend all home athletic contests during the 1972-73 season at student rates. Passes will be available after Aug. 1 from the office of the high school principal.

Wertman Hurls Logan Elm To 7-1 Decision Over TVHS

Senior pitcher Gary Wertman went all the way on the mound Thursday, hurling Logan Elm to a 7-1 win over visiting Teays Valley.

It was the second win of the season for the Braves' baseball team while the game was the opener for the Vikings.

Wertman gave up one walk, three hits and fanned eight batters. LE Coach Vic Pontius had not intended to use any of his pitchers for a full game this early in the season. But he reported that Wertman was doing a good job and his arm wasn't bothering him so he let him finish the game.

Sam Wilson started for Teays Valley and pitched the first four innings. Jerry Sabine finished the game. Between them they struck out three, walked two and gave up six hits.

* * *

THE lone run for Teays Valley came in the top of the first when Phil Salyers hit a hard double down the left field line and then advanced to third and scored on two passed balls. That was the only threat. In the second Lloyd McManus led off with a single but Wertman retired the next three men on strikeouts.

With two outs in the third inning, Salyers got his second hit, a single to left, but was stranded when the next hitter flyed out.

In the last four innings the only man to reach base was Salyers again. He was walked in the sixth.

For Logan Elm, Mike Holbrook, the first man up, singled to left center, moved up on a walk to Mark Justus and after two outs, both scored on a homer by Wertie Teets over the left field fence.

In the second, the Braves were three up and three down, and in the third Justus doubled but was left stranded.

The fourth run for the Braves came in the fourth inning when Teets doubled to left with one out, advanced on an error and scored on a single by Wertman.

* * *

AGAIN in the fifth the Braves were three up and three down, but in the sixth, exploded for three runs.

Gary Francis started the inning with a walk then with two outs, Doug Marshall doubled over the right fielder's head to drive in Francis. John Mead was safe at first on an error that advanced Marshall to third Mead stole second and both scored on error on a ground ball hit by Wertman.

The next game for Logan Elm is 4 p.m. Monday on the Braves' diamond. Bishop Flaget will provide the competition. Pontius has tabbed Francis for starting pitching role in the game.

Stranded Airman Finds Ohio Resident Wasn't Professor

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Air Force S. Sgt. Dave Buller of Salt Lake City, Utah, spoke up quickly when the man ahead of him in the Philadelphia airport ticket line said he'd rented a car to drive to Ohio.

Buller and the man who called himself Hayes both had been bumped off a scheduled flight from Philadelphia to Dayton.

Buller had to reach Wright-Patterson Air Force Base early the next morning to catch a plane to Utah, where he'd see his parents after 2½ years overseas.

Buller begged a ride to Ohio. Hayes said yes.

Arriving in Columbus before daylight, Hayes recruited a friend to drive Buller to Dayton.

"Mr. Hayes is the greatest guy I've ever met," Buller told the new driver, Ohio State University freshman football coach John Mummey.

"Yes," Mummey replied, "Coach Hayes is quite a guy."

"What's this 'coach Hayes,'" Buller asked.

"Didn't you know that was coach Woody Hayes of Ohio State?" Mummey laughed. Buller was dumbfounded. He thought "Mr. Hayes" was a professor of history.

"He kept saying 'fantastic,' and 'I can't believe it,'" Mummey told Columbus Dispatch sports editor Paul Hornung.

"It's the highlight of my life," Buller said. "I'll never forget him. I'm a Buckeye and a Woody Hayes fan for life."

Buller's new friend is the same man who threw a now-legendary tantrum on the field at the University of Michigan last fall as his Buckeyes lost a Big Ten football battle.

"Doggone," said Mummey. "That Woody's a Christian whether he knows it or not."

J. C. Snead Shares Lead At Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Driving, said J.C. Snead, is the key in the $200,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

"If you get it in the rough and you can't pick it up, you've got mud all over the ball," the drawling, raw-boned nephew of the legendary Sam Snead said Thursday after moving into a share of the first round lead with a 66.

"You hit it with that mud on it, and it's gonna come out of there like a crazy woodpecker. You don't know what it's going to do."

Snead, hero of the successful U.S. Ryder Cup team last year, was tied for the top spot after 18 holes with a pair of veterans, 52-year-old Julius Boros and balding Miller Barber, who matched his five-under-par effort on the cold, wet Sedgefield Country Club course.

The 7,034-yard layout was drenched by a heavy rain Wednesday, which came on the heels of a weekend snow. More rain and possible sleet is forecast Friday.

Because of the wet conditions and the skimpy grass in the fairways officials decided to play so-called winter rules. Players are allowed to lift, clean and pace their ball on the lined fairways and around the greens. They are not allowed to do so in the rough.

By being allowed to get their hands on the ball, the touring pros were able to make a mockery of par. Despite the unpleasant conditions, 66 of the field of 147 matched or broke par.
